RED SOX IN HOT FIGHT

TWO VICTORIES FOR AMERICANS

FINANCE BOARD URGES VETO OF BRIDGE GRAB

COMMISSION ADVISES RAILROAD BE FORCED TO PAY PORTION OF CONSTRUCTION COST.

The Finance Commission to-day sent a communication to Mayor Hibbard advising him to veto the franchise granted to the Union Freight Railway Company to lay its tracks on Northern avenue bridge. The commission advises him to petition to the next session of the Legislature for permission to assess part of the cost of the construction and maintenance of the bridge to the railroad company.

The Finance Commission also recommends the passage of a general act allowing the city to assess costs on railways using bridges over waterways.

The commission submitted to the Mayor the question of taking up the Union Railway tracks on Atlantic avenue from Northern avenue to Kneeland street, in the event of the tracks being laid across the bridge.

Mayor Hibbard has until Friday to veto or approve of the bridge franchise. He said last week that he would postpone action till the Finance Commission attended him of their finding.

The Mayor this afternoon gave a hearing to a number of citizens on the bridge question.

NEW HAVEN TRYING TO BOTTLE UP BRIDGE, DECLARES KILEY

At the hearing before the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners to-day, on the petition of the New Haven railroad to relocate its tracks over the Northern avenue bridge to South Boston, Daniel J. Kiley declared that the object of the railroad was to bottle up the approach to the bridge.

"Without appearing to ask for ANY part of the bridge, they are trying to bottle it up so that no other railway can lay tracks there, and they are actually asking for a part of the bridge itself, although it does not appear so on the plan," declared Mr. Kiley.

When the Legislature passed the act in 1903 laying out the avenue it gave the railroad the right to locate tracks across and lengthways with the avenue, the locations to be approved by the railroad commissioners, who were also to make traffic regulations for the new avenue.

At the hearing to-day the counsel for the New Haven road, Frank A. Farnham, and Engineer George T. Sampson presented plans for the new location of tracks and avoided making any mention of the bridge location until Mr. Kiley brought the matter up. They lately complained on the fact that they were not asking for a location on the bridge, but it was soon brought out, although not plain on the plans, that the new locations asked for would bottle up the portion of the bridge reserved for railway tracks on the South Boston end—actually extending thirty feet on the bridge itself.

Engineer Sampson had pieced no letter-ing on the plans submitted which would make plain all the points at issue, and they had to be orally explained to the commissioners and those attending the hearing. For this he was mildly criticised by Chairman W. Farley Hall, and the plans were returned for correction in that respect.

Attorney Farnham and Engineer Sampson stated that the tracks did not extend beyond the harbor line, claiming that the act of the Legislature gave them the right to lay the tracks as far as that point.

Mr. Kiley asked the Railroad Commissioners not to grant the petition of the New Haven road. He said:

"This matter ought to be postponed at least until the bridge matter has been settled. The Union Railway is a public nuisance anyway. I have seen young lives crushed out by it since my boyhood days, besides the lesser annoyances it causes. And others have tried to have the tracks taken up, but the road always exerts a powerful influence in the Legislature.

"Now it is asking for more privileges without having earned what it has. Why doesn't it offer to take up its superfluous tracks in return for this privilege?

"A place was reserved in the centre of this bridge for the New Haven road without legislative or any other authority that I can find. The bridge was designed and constructed for the New Haven Railroad at a cost to the city and State of nearly a million dollars, and they do not want to pay a small share of the cost.

"They are now trying to tie up the approach to the bridge so that no other company can lay tracks on it."

SEN. LINEHAN UNDER KNIFE

Senator Frank Linehan of South Boston was operated upon for appendicitis at the City Hospital this morning. At 2 o'clock this afternoon he had just come out of the ether and at the hospital the surgeons say that the operation was successful.

BATHER DROWNED AT SALEM WILLOWS

The body of Richard Rudolph, aged twenty-six years, of Northboro, was found early to-day on the beach at Salem Willows. Rudolph, who had been employed during the Summer in a souvenir store at the Willows, announced last night that he was going for a swim. The position of the body when found on the beach indicated that he was seized by cramps. Rudolph's father is employed in the Boston Public Library.

SENATOR SAVES LIVES AT FIRE

NEW YORK, July 14.—Senator Otto G. Foelker, whose vote in the State Senate made possible the passage of the anti-race gambling bill, demonstrated early today that quality of heroism which prompted him to leave the operating table at the risk of his life and go to the assistance of Governor Hughes on the deck of the Sagamore. Hiding his identity, Senator Foelker rushed into a burning tenement in Williamsburg, near his home, and saved two young girls who were partially overcome by smoke.

MANCHESTER, Eng., July 14.—President Roosevelt has sent to President Macara of the International Cotton Federation a signed portrait of himself in appreciation of his international work for the cotton trade.

Sheppard Wins the 1,500 Metres Run, While Flanagan Gets the Hammer Throw, Breaking Records.

LONDON, July 24.—America won the first two big events in the Olympic games here to-day, the hammer throw and the final in the 1,500-metre run, John J. Flanagan winning the former and Melvin W. Sheppard the latter. Both are members of the Irish-American team of New York.

As a consequence, the Star and Stripes were the first national colors to be run up on the Stadium arena flagstaff, and the American spectators and contestants alike cheered until they made their English cousins almost sick of the game.

Flanagan's throw and Sheppard's run were record performances. The big New York policeman threw the hammer 170 feet 4½ inches, after having finished second to Matt McGrath, his compatriot on the New York force, in the qualifying round. In the final Flanagan came strong and beat McGrath nearly two and one-half feet, the latter being second with a hurt of 167 feet 11 inches. Walsh of Canada was third was 158 feet 1½ inches.

"Big Bill" Horr, the Syracuse artist, and Talbott, America, were not up to form and failed to qualify.

The victory of Sheppard was particularly pleasing, as there was much complaint that the drawing in the preliminaries had thrown him and Halsted together, thereby shutting out one of the strongest of the American runners. Sheppard's time was 4:03 2-5, equaling the mark of Hallows in his preliminary heat, which is two seconds better than the previous Olympic record.

Sheppard ran a beautiful race, taking the event from H. A. Wilson, who was second and W. P. Hallows, third.

The 3,500-metre walk was won by G. E. Larner, an English policeman. The Americans were not interested in this, in fact, the only two events of the day that they set out to win were the two that they did win.

The bicycle and swimming events did not attract near the attention that the others did.

In the hammer-throwing event the various sections competed separately, each choosing a man for the final. C. Walsh of Canada made a throw of 160 feet 1½ inches, and G. R. Nicholson of England made a throw of 167 feet 9¾ inches.

Merritt J. McGrath, the New York policeman, won the hammer throw in the section in which he competed, with a sling of 167 feet 11 inches. It was a better throw than John J. Flanagan, McGrath's cop mate made in winning his section. Flanagan's mark being 166 feet 2½ inches.

Flanagan made good in the finals, however, with a record breaking throw of 170 feet, 4½ inches. This threw not only broke the Olympic record, but also the professional and amateur records of Great Britain.

McGrath was second in the hammer throw with a throw of 169 feet ½ inch, and Walsh third with 158 feet 1½ inches.

G. E. Larner, an englishman, picked as the winner 2,500 metre walk, won the first heat with ease, his time being 10:32. E. J. Webb, England, took the second heat in 10:17½. Canada came to the front with the winner of the third heat with G. Gould ing, who went the distance in 10:16. England captured the first two places in the final of the 3,500 metre walk with Larner first and Webb second. Kerr, an Australian, was third. Larner won by 100 yards, his time being 14:58

YANKEE IN BIKE RACE

In the 600 metre bicycle race the following men won in their respective sections and will race in the finals:

B. Johns, England, 59 seconds; W. Bailey, England, 59 4-5 seconds; C. Kingsbury, England, 59 2-5 seconds; Emperol, American, 1:00 1-5; Edmanged, France, 54 4-5 seconds; J. Vanmegem, Holland, 58 1-5 seconds; W. Andree, Canada, 55 4-5 seconds; Johnston, England, 54 1-5; Whitaker, France, 1:01 3-5; F. Veuter, South Africa, 58 4-5 seconds; Neugel, Germany, 54 1-5 seconds; E. Pope, England, 57 1-5 seconds; H. F. Price, England, 59 seconds; Dauffrey, France, 58 2-5 seconds; L. Benard, Belgium, 55 1-5 seconds; H. Schilles, France, won the heat in his section, but was disqualified on account of slow time, 1:10.

In the continuation of the 400-metre swimming event three heats of which were decided yesterday, F. E. Beaupaire of Australia, took the fourth heat, Pradshaw, England, the fifth, and H. Taylor, the sixth.

The seventh heat of the 400 metre swimming race was taken by Oechlt, an Austrian. Time—5:52 1-5. The eighth heat went to H. Hagos of Hungary in 6:10 4-5.

C. W. Gledhe, America, won the first heat in the fancy driving contest and A. Larner, Germany, the second heat.

The Americans have entered a protest against Tom Longboat, the Canadian Indian runner. If their protest is not allowed, however, they will accept the decision gracefully.

In the first heat of the twenty kilometres bicycle race L. Meredith of England was first; time 32:31. The second heat was taken by C. B. Kingsbury of England in 32:33 1-5.

C. J. Weints of America won the third heat in the 20 kilometre bicycle race, his time being 33:39 4-5, much slower than either of the first two heats.

The fourth heat was won by B. Jones, England. Time—32:39

J. Hanson, Swedish cyclist captured the fifth heat in 34:53 2-5.

C. E. Kingsbury, England, won the final in the twenty kilometre bicycle race, with H. A. Wilson, England, second, and Wedzwick, Belgium, third. Time—34:13 2-5.

In the trial heats of the three-mile team event H. A. Wilson, England, won the first heat in 16:00⅘, Grangeman of France won the second heat in 17:52. Grangeman was disqualified, however, and the heat given to the American.

The Olympic committee admitted to-day that the system of drawing by lot for positions in the various preliminaries worked to the disadvantage of America yesterday when it put Melvin W. Sheppard and J. P. Halsted together in the second heat of the 1,500 metre run. One had to lose, of course, and thereby be shut out of the finals. The committee said that it did not think such an unfortunate drawing would happen again.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Boston, July 14.—Ready to riddle the Detroits again in the fourth game of the series, the Red Sox laid their wires for a meal of Tiger meat, a diet which looked pretty tough, as the jungle team were particularly mysse and had their claws newly sharpened for some deadly work.

There was no flinching in the Red Sox ranks facing the tawny animal they had to subdue, and they were on hand to give Hughey Jennings and his menagerie a trip to the outer works before the engagement was called.

With two games won out of the three played, the fans rooted hard for another advantage in order to get the big end of the series before the Tigers could get beyond reach. There was never such confidence in a Hub team playing against champions.

The Tigers, playing under a terrific strain the last few weeks, were on the point of snapping, and it took all of Jennings's pepper talk to hold them to the job. The irrepressible leader never flagged in his efforts to get his boys on the right track, and he was forced to awaken the echoes to assure us with the locals.

Clews to Big Money Daily in Hidden Treasure Hunt

By "The Money Man."

That $1,000 in Gold Is for Somebody—It Might as Well Be You if You Get Busy.

Thus has been a rich day for the treasure hunters so far, but I have something up my sleeve for to-morrow that will give you greater delight. The people who are getting this treasure are those who HUNT FOR IT and do not stand around and try to be humorous at the expense of the searchers.

For instance, a deaf and dumb young man got $10 to-day where the Worcester cars start for the Dry City. There was a good clew to it yesterday and to-day, which others missed.

SOMETHING BIG EVERY DAY THIS WEEK, increasing in value as the days pass!

Someone is going to get that $1,000 in gold, and it might just as well be you. There's no string to this little fortune. All it requires are skill and persistency.

Women competing for the $850 Miller player piano should have their letters in this office just as soon as possible now. You get the piano for telling FIRST who Madame Alvarez is and suggesting the best ending to the story. Readers should be able to do this NOW.

The Castle Island clew, which first appeared Saturday, has not been run down. Someone has investigated within three inches of the treasure and missed it. There will be a great laugh on several thousand people when the careful hunter picks up this valuable reward.

Get in the hunt every day this week. The mystery story is on page 7.

RACING FOR LIFE IN FORESTS OF FLAME

THRILLING DASH OF LOADED TROLLEY CARS THROUGH BURNING WOODS.

Special to the Boston American.

YORK, Me., July 14.—Trapped by forest fires, which on every side suddenly hemmed them in, making it impossible to turn back, two cars laden with passengers on the Atlantic Shore Railroad dashed in a wild race for life through a burning forest and escaped through the nerve and courage of the car crews.

The two cars left Biddeford last night, one at 8:30 and the other an hour later, bound for Portsmouth, N. H.

While forest fires have been raging for many days in the general vicinity of the line of the railway, no unusual danger was anticipated, so both cars were ordered to proceed on schedule time.

The smoke hung low, and in the distance the ruddy glow of the fires could be plainly seen. As the first car was speeding along between Bald Hill and Cape Neddick, the flames crept nearer and nearer until the smoke grew stifling. Urged on by passengers and conductor, the motorman made a brave run for it, and soon left the blazing forests behind. The best had been done, and neither conductor nor motorman thought the car following would attempt the dangerous run, so no message was sent back, as it was likely the car following 30 hour later could have been reached.

Too Late to Turn Back.

Leaving Biddeford at 9:30, Jules with bated breath and a prayer, the motorman of the later car ran into a tract of forest at Bald Hill. The glare of the fire grew brighter and the smoke hung denser and lower. The motorman and conductor decided, as the car preceding them had made the run, they could

A greater speed was made. Soon the mistake was seen, but it was too late to rectify it. They could not turn back.

"We must run for it, I guess," said the motorman grimly.

Heavy canvas curtains were drawn around the new electric passenger, and they were told that it was a run for life or death.

But there was no relief for the brave motorman, as the open car was unprovided with curtain in front, and, blowing in full power, the motorman drove his car wildly forward between the two walls of fire.

Faster and faster flew the car and more blinding the heat, more stifling the clouds of smoke.

Motorman Collapsed.

The light car pitched and swayed dangerously as curves were rounded. The passengers, penned as they were in the enclosed sided car, were almost smothered by the heat.

A few moments more, it seemed an age, and the car burst through a final curtain of flame and smoke and out into the open. The motorman hastened to the relief of the motorman, who was almost overcome.

Throwing himself to a seat the latter reversed the lever to a stop and threw on the brakes just as the car jumped the track. Passengers crawled cautiously out and soon the motorman was revived sufficiently to take his blistered car into Portsmouth.

Forest fires are raging in York, Biddeford and Wells Beach have done at least $550,000 damage in the last week, and in and about the damage is $350,000, $250,000 to cut and standing timber, and $100,000 to orchards, outbuildings, cattle, crops and sheep flocks destroyed. It is feared that many more have lost their lives. Banks, as some of the residents of the fire zone have not been heard from.

HEAVY SHOWERS CHECK THE FLAMES AROUND PLYMOUTH

PLYMOUTH, July 14.—Several heavy showers in quick succession shortly after 7 a. m. to-day were extremely welcome to the dwellers in this section, who have been fighting the forest fires here for two days. The rain effectually checked the flames, and by noon there were only the wreaths of murky smoke rising from the blackened regions on the outskirts of the town and the fire was entirely under control.

All twilight last night and men went out to fight the flames, and they began by backfiring on Summer, Alden and Royal streets and on Oak Ridge. Early to-day the line had succeeded in fully preventing the flames from entering the town, and when the rain came they gave up their work. Forests were ruined by the storm of the toll would make it impossible for the fire to start up again.

During the early hours to-day there was great apprehension among the residents on the outskirts of the town. Many of the families on Royal street took their household goods out of their houses and carried them to the open fields near by.

About 1,000 persons gathered on Standish street, near the monument, to watch the fighters battling with the flames last night.

BIG ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP STARTS ON LONG TRIP

Leaves Constance, With Count at the Helm, for Twenty-four Hours' Flight.

MAY CONTINUE TO METZ

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, July 14.—The Zeppelin airship made a successful departure from the shores of Lake Constance at 2:22 p. m. to-day, on its much heralded trip through the air that is expected to last twenty-four hours. It started in the direction of Constance and sailed majestically away on its long journey. There is very prospect of a record trip.

The proposed route leads over Constance, Schaffhausen, Bale, Milhausen, Freiburg, Karlsruhe, Strasburg, Mannheim and Mayence. The journey may possibly be continued to Metz, if time allows. The occupants of the car were Count Zeppelin; his nephew, Count Ferdinand Zeppelin; Professor Hergesell, representing the ministry of the interior; Captain Mischke of the navy; Majors Hesse of the general staff, Eichmann of the war ministry and Sperling of the balloon regiment of the army. Engineer Dorry and Rizal and six merchants. No unofficial passenger was permitted to make the trip.

The Crown Prince, Frederick William, came from Bregenz, to be present at the departure.

The King of Wurtemberg, who is staying at the interior palace here, was also a visitor to the balloon shed. The King and Queen of Wurtemberg and the richly gilt of the floating shed on board the royal motor boat at the quay.

The airship soon emerged from her floating house, steered majestically and leaving the slip. She slowly reached the open lake and was clear of her shed, and with her keel even with the surface of the water, she hung in the air like a gigantic sea-going leviathan, forced by some mysterious power out of her element.

Count Zeppelin was at the helm, and he turned the bow of the ship in the direction of Constance. It is estimated that the airship started out at the rate of thirty-two miles an hour. It really undistanced the speedy motor boats and the slower excursion steamboats were soon left far behind.

BOY DIES OF SUNSTROKE

Francis Cooney, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cooney, who lives on Charlestown road, Newton, died to-day from the effects of a sunstroke sustained last Saturday. The lad was playing in the yard when stricken and was in a comatose condition until he died. The attending physicians say that he would have had a chance for recovery if for the intense heat of the past three days.

LODGING HOUSE GIRL UNCONSCIOUS; GAS ON

MISS JENNIE COOMBS FOUND IN SOUTH END ROOM IN SERIOUS CONDITION.

Jennie Coombs, twenty-one years of age, unmarried, very good looking, a saleswoman in a downtown store, was found unconscious in her little room on the top floor of the lodging house, No. 50 Worcester street, Boylston end, to-day. The gas jets were found turned wide open while the window screens had been removed and the window partly closed. The door of the room was standing slightly ajar.

Dr. Charles P. Hunter, the proprietress of the lodging house, at once telephoned to the police office the fact was found by a chambermaid.

The girl was rushed to the City Hospital in the ambulance from Station 4. At the City Hospital she was partially resuscitated, but she at once became hysterical. The girl was also in a delirious state.

Mrs. Hunter, the proprietress of the lodging house, says she does not understand the case at all. She does not know if the room door was open and the windows closed. She says that last evening Miss Coombs seemed to be entirely herself and not the least depressed.

The girl came to Boston four months ago from Newfoundland and has lived with Mrs. Hunter ever since. On her dresser were the pictures of several young men. There were also several rosaries and prayer books.

Mrs. Hunter says she does not know where the girl's family lives in Newfoundland. Miss Coombs is always very reserved.

When found by the chambermaid, Miss Coombs was lying on the floor, fully dressed, as force turned toward the window. Besides the gas pouring forth with the full fixture acted in having her sent to the hospital, her life will possibly be saved.

HAMMOND ILL FROM LOBSTER

Special to the Boston American.

He was poisoned the day following his return from the funeral of ex-President Grover Cleveland. BOY SNATCHED FROM MOTHER IN BIG CROWD

Strange Man Forcibly Kidnaps Lad From Society Woman at Pittsburg.

SEPARATED FROM HUSBAND

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 14.—A most daring case of kidnapping was brought to the attention of the police to-day.

Yesterday afternoon, in a crowded downtown department store, Lester Ryan Lally, 3 years old, was violently snatched from the hands of his mother, Mrs. Vivian B. Lally of Oakdale. The kidnapper is unknown to Mrs. Lally, although she had an excellent idea of his general appearance.

After snatching the child he hurried down Pennsylvania avenue to Seventh avenue, where he was lost.

Three years ago the Queens County Court of New York granted Mrs. Lally separation from her husband, Wilkinson Lally, who has been connected with the Standard Oil Company in New York. Since that time, Mrs. Lally declared, he has made many attempts to take from her all their only child, which was granted her by the court at the time of their separation.

Five years ago the wedding of Miss Vivian Russell and Wilkinson Lally was quite a society event in Brooklyn. Mr. Lally is a graduate of Princeton and after spending four years casting for his father's coal estate in Alsaka, united to the oil business with an independent concern which was later absorbed by the Standard Oil Company. In the sway Mr. Lally acquired a good position with the Standard and his salary permitted the couple to live in a good residence in Brooklyn.

The evening before the court rendered its decision granting me Lester," said Mrs. Lally, "Mr. Lally went to the home of his mother and at the point of a revolver took the child. He had previously come square with the baby, however, when his own brother, Archie, forced the lad to give him. Since that time Mr. Lally has had but little to do with his parents. He has visited home but once since that time, and his mission on that occasion was to kidnap the baby.

MAYOR CALLS COUNCIL TO ACT ON LOAN

Mayor Hibbard to-day announced that he would call a special meeting of the Common Council for Thursday evening. He is desirous of having the members of that body take action on the $250,000 loan order for the repair of the city's streets passed by the Board of Aldermen. At a former meeting of the council the members of that body passed an order appropriating the sum of $500,000, but when it reached the aldermen they reduced it by one-half.

Another matter of equal importance which the Mayor is desirous of clearing up is that of the city's streets. From the side of the city's armories, which amounts to $16,000. The Mayor wants this money used for repaving streets, while the Finance Committee recommends that it be used for the payment of the State tax.

Why Rengo Reduces Fat.

Anti-Fats and Starvation Diet Result in Wrecking of the System.

Fat as a general rule comes from the fallen of the digestive organs to do their work properly. There is always some part of the food eaten which is not digested as it should be, but is made up in the form of fat and sent by the blood to various parts of the body. This accumulation continues constantly until within a comparatively short time, the heart becomes incased in a layer of fat and is, in fact, the heart wears in one of the first vital organs to become affected in this manner.

The food, therefore, in cases of fat, is not properly assimilated. That is, part of the food is retained by the body which should not be retained, and part which should be retained is thrown out. This does not always mean dysentery or indigestion, for one may have a very healthy stomach and yet begin to grow fat, through an apparent cause.

It is evident to any one, then, that to try to reduce fat by starving the fat is both cruel and dangerous. It may or may not have the desired effect, but what is always certain is that a starvation diet will give a shock to the whole system and wreck it. The victim then becomes a subject for the sanitarium or becomes an invalid. The same thing happens by trying to use artificial remedies that positively stop digestion, something which is absurd and which sooner or later results in a break down of some organ and consequent disease, Bright's Disease, Nephritis, Gastritis and Neuritis are only a few of the dire ailments.

Vegetal fruit is and has been known for years as a remarkable regulator of the system. In a permanent way, one of such a mixture, the body will assume an absolutely normal condition, being neither too thin nor too large, and preserving the balance of all the organs, making the fortunate one a woman who sees it, healthy and happy.

This is what Rengo does. It contains a vegetal fruit principle which has this faculty of perfectly assimilating food taken into the body. That is the secret. It has resulted in a great deal of fat being removed, but when a person has once reduced and put them about 7 Pemberton St., Malden, Lewis & Co., 145 Washington St. and 150 Portland St.

Rengo is safe. It not only reduces your weight to normal, but it increases your strength. There is nothing "just as good" as Rengo. The regular $1.00 size will send you a trial package free by mail, if you write them direct to Detroit, no free packages at drug stores.

TRACE 2 MYSTERY SUSPECTS

Arrests Expected Soon for Foul Murder of Hazel Drew at Troy, N. Y.

BOY TELLS STRANGE STORY

TROY, N. Y., July 14.—That nineteen-year-old Hazel Drew, of No. 400 Fourth street, was murdered on a dark and lonely road within a short distance of Teal's Pond, fourteen miles from this city, was established to-day beyond a doubt. One, and possibly two, arrests on suspicion will be made to-day.

What connection there may have been between the flight of the mutilated woman's body up the hills known as the Alps, in the Taborton district, before dawn, July 4, and the wretched death of the young woman, has not been established and never may be known.

Christopher Crape, proprietor of the inn at Sand Lake, clings to his story of a driving car, containing two men and two women, and which came back with only one woman. No trace of the automobile has been found.

Attacked and Beaten to Death.

Miss Drew was killed by a blow on the head with a stone, club or like weapon, and, according to uncertain evidence obtained by District Attorney Jarvis P. O'Brien, after she had been brutally attacked. Her body was carried from the shrubbery by the roadside down the sheer edge of a gully to the pond, fifty rods away, and buried into the water.

This is the belief of the District Attorney and of County Detective Duncan C. Kaye, after a careful investigation. They went to Sand Lake Saturday and talked casually with Frank Smith, a seventeen-year-old farmhand, strong and well built, who helped drag the body from the pond, where it had rested in the shallows, face downward.

The boy did not mention ever having known the girl, though he lived as her next door neighbor for years, and despite all the expressed conjectures of the detectives and shocked farmers, did not say that he had seen and talked with her by the wrecked roadside a short distance from the pond only four days previously.

Met the Girl in the Road.

With fear and a trembling of limbs, he told to-day, after a short two hours' examination at the Summer boarding house and farm of Philip Brown, half a mile from the scene of the tragedy, how he had met Hazel in the dusk of the evening when she apparently was bound to the home of her uncle, William Taylor.

"I was with Rudolph Gundrum, the charcoal burner, who lives two miles east of here, and we were on his wagon going down to the Averill Park where we came up to Hazel in the road," said the boy. "She looked real pretty," said the boy. "She was very jolly. We stopped and talked a moment with her.

"We went on down to the park, then, and had a drink in Harris's saloon, talked a moment to Mr. Harris, who was behind the bar, and we went right out.

"Grandma went home, I think. I went around several places and walked back home late. I think I got in about 11 o'clock, but I guess nobody heard me."

"Now, Frank," said District Attorney O'Brien, "didn't you meet Frank Richmond, who works the farm for Hazel's uncle, and Mrs. Richmond and his brother somewhere that night and say you had seen Hazel and asked whether they had her as a guest at their house?"

"Well, yes, I guess I did. I met them as a road up there near Sand Lake about 10:30."

The boy's story became an intricate maze of corrections and mistakes, so that Wm. P. Powers, of the District Attorney's office, could scarcely make coherent stenographic notes. Gundrum, the farmer, and the real farmer, will be closely questioned when found to test the boy Smith's story.

Hazel Drew, Victim in Auto Tragedy

NO GROUND FOR DIVORCE, SAYS JOHN L.'S WIFE

I'LL CONTEST SUIT AND BLOCK ANY PLANS TO REMARRY, DECLARES MRS. SULLIVAN.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 14.—"If John tries to divorce me I will contest the case to the end. I fear he plans to marry a rich widow. They say she is worth anywhere from $50,000 to half a million. John never gave me a cent in the twenty-two years I have been separated from him. I do not think it right for him to try to get a divorce now to marry this rich woman. He ought to do something for me. And he has absolutely no ground for divorce. I left him on account of his dissipated habits. Outside of his conduct that way, however, I haven't a word to say against him. We were very happy in our married life, short though it was."

In this statement Mrs. John L. Sullivan of Centreville, a little town in the Pawtuxet valley, sums up her attitude regarding the reported divorce libel of her famous husband.

Wed Hero of the Hour.

If the former champion tries to divorce his wife he will find himself up against a harder proposition than the prize ring ever offered him, for his wife is not to be scared or bluffed into yielding. She has retained a lawyer to look out for her interests and will stand up for what she thinks are her rights.

Mrs. Sullivan is living with her sister, Mrs. Eldridge, and her brother, George Bates, the old elephant trainer, in a modest cottage. She is now about fifty years old. In telling about her life with John L. she said:

"I was born in Natick, Rhode Island. My parents were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bates. My brother, George, who has gone totally unspotted use of late years, travelled with Barnum & Bailey's circus, trimming the elephants.

"I went to Boston in 1882 to see my brother when the circus was there. At that time John L. Sullivan had just defeated Paddy Ryan, was champion of the world and the hero of the hour. I met him. I fell in love with him immediately and he seemed to with me, reciprocate.

"There was only a brief courtship. We loved each other and were married before the year was out in St. Patrick's church, Roxbury.

"At first we were very happy. John was good to me. But he would drink. And he had a circle of theatrical, pugilistic and sporting friends that I had never been used to. I was only a quiet country girl.

Yet Uninformed.

"Our little baby boy, John L. Sullivan, Jr., as we named him, was born. When he was two and one-half years old he was taken ill with diphtheria. I took the baby home to mother's, where he died. I never lived with John after that. It was so long ago, when he was playing in Providence, I went to the theatre and met him and went to dinner with him. He was quite nice to me.

"Six years ago he came to Providence again. I went to the theatre and saw him act. But I did not meet him. I have not set eyes on him since.

"Now comes this report of a divorce proceeding. A month ago a friend of John wrote to me. The letter was evidently a 'feeler.' It said that John was getting along in life and wanted to wed again. Would I oppose a divorce?

"I did not answer the letter. But I showed it to a lawyer, who told me not to say anything. But I think I might as well declare that I will oppose a divorce because I do not think such would be right.

"I have received no official announcement concerning any divorce. I have not heard a word from John on that or any other matter. But I shall oppose any divorce he may try to get."

VANDERBILT PASSES WIFE IN MID-OCEAN

NEW YORK, July 14.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who sails from Liverpool on the Mauretania on Wednesday, will pass his former wife, Elsie French Vanderbilt, on the ocean. The former Mrs. Vanderbilt sails to-day on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, with her mother and Mr. and Mrs. Wagstaff, her brother-in-law and sister.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's departure from England is said to be due to the former wife's visit there. She and her mother and Mr. and Mrs. Wagstaff came from Newport on Sunday and have been stopping at the St. Regis. Alfred G. Vanderbilt stops at The Plaza when in town.

FIND DOLPHIN VICTIM'S BODY?

CATAUMET, July 14.—The body of a man, believed to have been one of the victims of the launch Dolphin, was washed ashore shortly before noon to-day. An identification is expected within a short time.

ROOSEVELT GOING TO NAVAL CONFERENCE

NEWPORT, R. I., July 14.—President Roosevelt will be present at the final discussion of the naval conference now in session at the Naval War College. President Roosevelt will come direct to Newport on his private yacht Mayflower, arriving likely on the 22d instant.

MUST SEND OUT NOTICES

Judge Braley of the Superior Court to-day instructed Albert Hall and Charles F. Weed, who are the receivers for the defunct Providence Securities and Banking Company, that they must send out to the 17,500 creditors postal card notices before the receivers' request that they be allowed to retain the $3,700 left of the company's assets to pay for their services be allowed.

It seems that the total claims amounted to $27,000, $10,000 being regular claims and $75,000 being on notes that were endorsed by members of the company.

BRYAN AND KERN GREET COMMITTEE

Begin Work of Picking Chairman to Manage Democratic Campaign.

SEVERAL NAMED FOR JOB

FAIRVIEW, Lincoln, Neb., July 14.—The first formal work on the Democratic campaign was taken up here to-day, when members of the National Committee called upon W. J. Bryan and J. W. Kern, the presidential and vice presidential nominees, at the Bryan home.

It is expected that the committee will be in session here until Wednesday, and that a chairman of the committee will be selected and the city for the national head quarters be determined upon.

The committee were taken to Fairview in special trolley cars.

The names so far most prominently mentioned for the chairmanship are National Committeeman Ollie M. James of Kentucky, John H. Atwood of Kansas and Lamb of Indiana, and D. J. Campau, formerly member of the committee for Michigan.

While Mr. Bryan believes Mr. James to be one of the most capable men in the party, it is said he does not want the place. First and foremost, Mr. James is an orator, and he believes his greatest usefulness can be exerted on the platform. Atwood is highly thought of, particularly among Westerners, but Eastern sentiment is believed to lie between Lamb and Campau. The latter's wide experience and keen business ability make him a favorite for the place.

GRAFTERS EMPLOYED ASSASSINS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—Assassins, it was disclosed here to-day, are being employed by San Francisco grafters to escape punishment for looting the city treasury. This was revealed when John Clendinen, who was arrested for dynamiting the house of James Gallagher, chief witness in the graft prosecutions, confessed that his brother Peter had been paid $1,000 to do the foul slaughter, and that he himself carried out the plan to murder.

Detectives so far have failed to arrest Peter Clendinen. They arrested John Clendinen through a letter he wrote his brother, threatening exposure if he were not given his share of the money. The prisoner refuses to disclose the names of his accomplices or the name of the man who paid $1,000 for the dynamiting job.

He revealed to District Attorney Langdon all the details of the dynamiting, revealed the location of two caches where dynamite was hidden and showed on the ground how the explosion was planned.

Having failed to kill Gallagher before, he said, it had been decided to wreck his house, hoping that in this way their murderous end might be attained.

HURLEY WINS IN BAND FIGHT

Mayor John F. Hurley of Salem to-day won a victory in the Supreme Court, when Judge Braley refused to grant a writ of mandamus compelling the Mayor to issue a license to the Lynn Cadet Band for Sunday afternoon and evening concerts at Salem Willows.

The Boston & Northern Railroad Company entered into a contract with the Lynn Cadet Band to furnish Sunday concerts at Salem Willows.

Mayor Hurley refused to grant the license, giving as his principal reason that there were five bands in Salem as good, if not better, than the Lynn band.

Babcock's Giant Run Built in Shape of Big Interrogation Point.

Knights of Pythias day will be celebrated at Wonderland August 3, when 125,000 members of the order will convene in Boston.

The knights and ladies will have the run of the park and the exclusive use of the mammoth ballroom for the evening. The arrangement was completed yesterday, and the several high-class extra attractions are being booked for that date.

Yesterday and today are the Sunday American Outing days at Wonderland with the biggest string of free tickets yet, letting them into the park and Hell Gate free, giving a free ride on the Whip and the Pompeii Hill Wild West Show for ten cents, and two rides each on the Merry-go-round, Velvet Coaster and Miniature Railway on the payment of the cents.

Girl Swimmer Training.

Before her performances in Wonderland Annette Kellerman daily swims from Revere Beach to Nahant, a distance of four miles, accompanied by her manager, James Sullivan, in a boat. She is in splendid training for her attempt to swim from the Charlestown Bridge to the Boston Light on July 20, and for only two days of exhibition and skill.

The committee having in charge the A. O. H. convention, to be held in Lynn, have made arrangements for Wednesday's outing at the park August 25.

Dare Devil Babcock will do his death-defying ride at Wonderland all the rest of this week.

Babcock's Daring Dash.

How would you like to ride in and out of an interrogation point at the rate of a mile a minute or faster?

The loop-the-loop and bump-the-gap apparatus, down and around which Babcock does his deadly bicycle whirl, is shaped like a huge interrogation point when Babcock starts at the top of the steep incline and dashes down to the open trap of the loop on his bicycle.

When he is in the loop the trap swings the other way and opens on the farther side, giving the bold rider exit way on over the perilous "gap" and onto the final landing platform.

At this stage of the ride the apparatus resembles an interrogation mark, only faced the other way.

Going to the ride is to a question mark. Coming out it is from a question mark.

The Question Mark Query.

And there's a hideous question that confronts the rider every time—does he, I, myself, coming out at the end of this trap, dead or alive?

Thus the big apparatus is a question mark to the rider in more senses than one.

The answer to the question so far has always been favorable. But Mr. Babcock never knows when that reply might be reversed and injury to life or limb be the final outcome.

"It is nerve," says Babcock, "that does the trick. Or, rather lack of nerve. Once a man begins to be nervous on a ride like this he would better quit before he is killed.

"I don't mean to say that skill and knowledge of the game are not heavy factors. But a man must not think of accidents and disaster. He must ride confident that he is coming out all right. That is half the battle."

NEPONSET RIVER DROWNING

HYDE PARK, July 14—Brune, seven year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Villello of No. 23 East Glenwood avenue, was drowned in the Neponset River near his home. He was playing on a raft.

20 INJURED, 1 DYING IN TROLLEY COLLISION

PANIC IN SHOPPING DISTRICT AS CARS COME TOGETHER WITH TERRIFIC FORCE.

With a crash that was heard many blocks distant, two heavily laden street cars collided at Washington and Essex streets to-day. One woman was possibly fatally injured, while at least twenty passengers were badly bruised and shaken by the force of the collision. Women cried out in terror and men leaped as the two cars banged together.

The seriously injured:

Wagner, Mrs. Catherine, widow, living at No. 10 Garland street, Dorchester; suffering from internal injuries. Mrs. Wagner was riding on a front seat of a northbound open car.

Right at Washington and Essex streets the north bound car crashed into a south-bound East Boston ferry car.

The collision came so unexpectedly that few had time to jump. Mrs. Wagner was thrown forward violently against the dash-board of the north bound car by the force of the collision.

Men and women did their best to leap to safety, but many of those in both cars received bad bruises on being thrown against seats forward. For a short time there was the wildest excitement.

Mrs. Wagner was the most seriously injured. She lay helpless on the floor in front of the northbound car. She was picked up by the street car men and police men and hurriedly placed in a police ambulance and taken to the Relief Hospital.

At the hospital after a quick examination the surgeon reported that she was suffering from internal injuries.

The other cars are good.

TREMONT—The handsome girls and laugh making comedians of "A Knight for a Day" opened another engagement to audience at the Tremont last evening. The gaiety is now in a third month of local presentation. Last evening's audience laughed at pretty much everything that Comedian John Slavin or Miss May Vokes did in their respective roles of waiter turned knight and "serpent lady" turned explorer and romantician. The girls on the rollers still succeed in their graceful maneuvers also.

IRVINGTON SQUARE—Among the modern plays, classed as melodrama, which have appeared at the Irvington Square Theatre, "Down by the Sea" must stand at the head of the list. Whether it was its suburbing and refreshing name that drew the patrons in large numbers yesterday or the quality of the drama would be difficult to state. With Edward M. Racey and Frances McHenry in the leading characters, the audience found much to commend, while Wilmer Walter, Harold Chapman, Charles Stevens, Tommy Sherrer and other name in full a welcome.

PALACE—This week's bill at the Palace Theatre is just the kind to drive away chill care. It is lively and pleasing from start to finish, and the curtain raiser is a comic skit called "Dooley's Dry Goods Store," with the dry goods perhaps a trifle overdone. "The Mystic Box." The comedy is of the rapid fire order, and the gamers are Frank Pinney, John J. Black, Milton Schuster and Marie Berkley. Excellent musical numbers are introduced by Fred Black, Edith Lyner, Minnie Reinhart, Tillie Cohen and Edwin Walters.

The Picture Shows.

STAR—The Cool Star Theatre is presenting six long films. "The Girl Next Door" is the strongest, while "Twixt Love and Duty" and "The Circus Boy" are also quite interesting. Three comic selections carry off the laurels.

HUB—Miles Brothers' moving pictures, catchy songs, capable singers and a clever vaudeville, interesting from an educational point, are being presented at the Hub. One of the most interesting pictures is "The Perjurer," a dramatic story, and another is "Stockholm." Last, but not least, is the incidental music by the Hub orchestra.

SCENIC TEMPLE—The Scenic Temple with its ivy-clad walls, its trailing arbutus and its trellised waterfall, with flowering plants in the window, presents an inviting appearance to amusement patrons during the torrid season. The motion pictures are entirely new, and the illustrated songs are up-to-date and well rendered.

In the Parks.

WONDERLAND—A feature of especial interest was yesterday added to the program in Wonderland's big program—a real pickaninny band from the Jenkins Orphanage Asylum at Charlestown, S. C. There are about twenty little chaps in the organization, led by Samuel Coxum, who is only nine years of age, but they are all experienced players, the result of several years of training at this celebrated institution, of which the Rev. D. J. Jenkins is the president. In the great free circus program for the week Oscar V. Babcock, for 10 cents, will make his thrilling loop-the-loop on a bicycle twice daily.

PARAGON PARK—Paragon Park, always particularly strong on its musical attractions, is making a special feature this week of popular selections, both by Mac-Gay's Mariband Band, by H. P. Blaney, "The Man Who Sings to Beat the Band," led by Johnny Maguire, who is making a hit with the singing of "Tipperary." At every interval of the afternoon or evening when there is not some free circus act in progress, the grand plaza between the Palm Garden and the Auditorium is thronged with people to hear the band concert program with the solo and duet numbers by Blaney and Song Magnire.

LEXINGTON PARK—Melody, music, dancing and a lively time are promised in the rustic theatre at Lexington Park. The Alabam Troubadours, a 20-people company of night hawkers, made a big hit at their opening show yesterday afternoon and evening. Pickaninny chorus and old Southern folk songs are features.

NORUMBEGA PARK—Teele's full band of thirty pieces at Norumbega Park is a great attraction. The show for this week made a hit at yesterday afternoon and evening performances. Miss Marlo with her companions in the Marlo Trio give a very difficult novelty triple horizontal bar performance. It is a real sensational and artistic gymnastic feat.

NO HOT-WAVES TO SPOIL FUN AT LAKE PARK

The largest attendance of members of the Sunday American Free Outing Club was registered at Canobie Lake Park yesterday and the balance of the free ticket holders will have Friday in which to enjoy their coupons.

The cool wooded hillside and lake shore at the park and breezy rocks are ever ready antidotes for hot weather and AMERICAN readers are quick to take advantage of them. They have twenty free outings with AMERICAN free tickets, while admission to Canobie Lake Park and its natural beauties is always free.

On next Sunday there are 40 free tickets for Canobie Lake Park will be published, giving the club members new attractions and more wholesome recreation on the following Monday and Friday.

QUARRELS WITH SWEETHEART; KILLS HIMSELF

Because he became despondent through brooding over a quarrel with a Waltham girl, to whom he was at one time engaged to be married, Merritt A. McArthur, twenty-eight years old, unmarried, a lodger in the house No. 273 Princeton street, East Boston, committed suicide in his room late yesterday afternoon by shooting himself in the head.

He was a native of Amherst, N. S., and was employed as an automobile garage on Sumner street in the West End as a car washer.

Robert F. Lyle, seventeen-year-old son of Mr. Lyle, went to McArthur's room to call him to supper, and on opening the door saw McArthur lying on the floor. Beside him was a 32-caliber revolver. McArthur had used one shot which took effect in the temple.

DAINTY STAGE BEAUTY MAKES HIT AT TREMONT

Refreshing Offerings at Theatres, Picture Houses and at the Parks.

Miss Bessie Brashears is a charming refutation of the old saying that the advice of friends is not to be depended upon.

There is the old joke, too, about the man who said:

"I'm in the hands of my friends. I see my finish."

Miss Brashear, having taken the advice of friends, even against her own wishes and opinion, now admits that those friends knew better than she did. Which is a great deal for any girl, especially a pretty girl, to admit. For pretty girls are apt to be more self-willed and opinionated than is good for them.

Two years ago Miss Bessie Brashears was living at home, enjoying her round of social life and never dreaming of going on the stage. But she could dance and sing, doing both unusually well. She had a charming manner. Her friends said:

"Bessie, why don't you go on the stage?"

And Miss Bessie lifted her nose in the air and said: "How ridiculous. I wouldn't like the stage and I wouldn't succeed there and I don't want to go on the stage and I won't."

But she did.

She went on the stage and she succeeded and she likes it, too. She is a member of "A Knight for a Day" company and is playing nightly.

"My friends wouldn't let me alone," she explains, when asked about the change of mind, "and I found the stage work pleasant and not too difficult. I do not aspire to be a great dramatic star. But I am getting valuable experience in musical comedy. I guess my friends were right after all."

Which is considerable for any girl to admit about her friends.

REFRESHING PRESENTATIONS.

BOSTON THEATRE—The Romany Opera Company, under direction of Messrs. under Bevan and George Homans, presented "Fanst" at the Boston Theatre last night as the head-liner in the all-vaudeville bill which R. F. Keith is temporarily offering at that playhouse. The advent of this grand opera company into vaudeville was a delightful Summer diversion. Mary Oliver and Miss Florence Gahm are alternating as Marguerite. The chorus is good large, but is entirely satisfactory, and the principals are competent soloists.

The individual act is by Frank Bush-Cliff, the English boy. Estelle Wordette and Jules Keen have a one-act sketch entitled "A Honeymoon in the Catskills."

ELKS REVEL AT REUNION

DALLAS, Texas, July 14—The reunion and annual convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, which formally began last night, is in full swing today.

Throughout the day the streets were literally filled with marching clubs and brass bands.

Yesterday afternoon nearly 1,000 persons sat down to a typical Southern dinner in Machinery Hall at the Fair Grounds, given to members of the order and their families. The waitresses were some two score of old nigger mammies, with banana turbans on their heads and the sleeves of their freshly starched print dresses rolled high above their elbows.

Last night in the Fair Grounds auditorium the first formal function was held. William H. Atwell, past exalted ruler of Dallas Lodge, and chairman of the reception committee, delivered the address of welcome.

Detroit and Los Angeles are the only candidates for the 1909 convention.

UNIQUE GAMES AT FIELD DAY

Every preparation is to-day complete for the annual outing and field day of the members and friends of St. Stephen's Parish, North End, at Oak Island Grove to-morrow. The committee of arrangements expects this year's outing to be the greatest in the history of the North End church, for thousands of former parishioners now living elsewhere have promised to be present.

The outing will begin at 10 a. m. and continue until late in the evening. There will be athletic games, baseball sports for the boys and the girls such as running races, and such races as shoe tossing and a baseball game between the North End Athletics and the Oak Grove girls.

Miss Katherine T. Driscoll and Miss Annie McLoughlin are in charge of the refreshment booths while the members of the parish will attend. The dancing, afternoon and evening, is in charge of Professor O'Meallia.

The committee in general charge is headed by Henry S. Fitzgerald, chairman; John J. Leahy, secretary, and John O'Hare, treasurer.

PAPER MAKERS TO FIGHT CUT

TURNERS FALLS, July 14—The paper-makers employed by the International Paper Company at the Montague mill have voted not to accept the ten per cent. cut in wages that was recently declared by the company.

President Casey of the Paper Makers' Union will take up the matter with the officials of the company in New York, each union appointing a man to go with him.

TO GUARD HENS WITH GUN.

NASHUA, N. H., July 14—Fred C. Allen of Lincoln avenue has asked permission of the police to guard his hen coop with a shotgun. Last night seventeen of his pullets were stolen.

MORAN FAST IMPROVING

That District Attorney John B. Moran is fast winning his fight against tuberculosis was the statement made by the district attorney's office to-day announced. The official had just returned from a visit to his chief in his retreat in the heart of the Adirondack Mountains.

"I was wonderfully pleased as well as genuinely surprised to see his cheeks had filled out and a general look of returning health in his whole physique," said the official. "When I approached him he sprang up and greeted me with his old-time vigor.

"He said that if he continued to improve at the present rate he would be able to return to Boston in the Fall and enter the gubernatorial race."

GIRL DRINKS FATAL CYANIDE

NEW YORK, July 14.—Driven into melancholia by the fear of consumption, Katherine Garrity, a pretty young girl of No. 107 East Eighty-fifth street, employed in a Ninth avenue department store, committed suicide in Central Park by swallowing 30 cyanide of potassium. The nature of the poison used gave rise unjustly to a police theory that the girl was in some way connected with the case of Dr. William H. Wilson of Philadelphia, who was poisoned by ale in which cyanide of potassium had been placed.

LAFFERTY HELD ON CHARGE OF FORGERY

SECRETARY OF FIREMEN'S RELIEF FUND UNDER $3,000 BONDS FOR HIGHER COURT.

Michael J. Lafferty, thirty-eight years of age, of No. 16 Lovey street, Dorchester, was to-day arrested by Inspectors Robinson and Harris charged with forging the name of Fire Commissioner Samuel D. Parker to a check for $150 and passing it upon the American Trust Company.

Lafferty, who is one of the best known men about Boston, is secretary of the Boston Firemen's Relief Fund of which Mayor Hibbard, Fire Commissioner Parker and former Fire Commissioner Benjamin W. Wells are trustees. For the past sixteen years he has been assistant secretary and recorded at fire headquarters. His salary is $1,600 a year. He is well known in fraternal and social circles.

The inspectors declare that he admitted the charge against him and said that he had spent the money for living expenses. It is said he has played the races not extensively but consistently and that he has been unfortunate in them. The police intimate that he has other charges to meet like that of to-day.

He was taken to the first session of the Municipal Criminal Court before Judge Dismukes where he waived examination and was held in $5,000 bail. His attorney is Edward J. Logan.

FRIEL'S MONEY MISSING WHEN BODY FOUND

Because a large sum of money, which he is known to have had with him when he left his house, is missing, the police are investigating the death of Frederick H. W. Friel, whose body was found floating in the harbor Saturday, although Medical Examiner MacDonald, after performing an autopsy, gave the cause of death as accidental drowning.

Friel lived at No. 79 Dover street, South End, and was a sailor, and Friday, after receiving his weekly wage, went home to his wife late in the night that he was going back to the ship. He left the house and that was the last seen of him alive.

The body was recovered within a short distance of the vessel and identified by members of the crew of the schooner on which he was employed.

50 MEXICANS CONDEMNED TO DIE AS REBELS

GALVESTON, Tex., July 14.—A message smuggled through the Mexican lines from Texas Grandes, Mexico, says fifty revolutionists, out of nearly two hundred captured, have been given a farcical trial and condemned to be shot for conspiring against the Mexican Government and for murder. The condemned men were removed from the prison two days ago, and it is supposed they have been shot.

Nearly one hundred other Mexicans, known to be in sympathy with the revolutionists, have been convicted of assisting and sheltering bandits. They receive each sentenced from ten to twenty years in the salt mines, which mean that they have been condemned to slow death, for no prisoner has ever returned from ten years in the mines.

2 WOMEN IN LAND DISPUTE

A five years' dispute over a boundary between two plots of land in Roxbury resulted to-day in the filing of a suit for damages against Mrs. Ellen F. Hennessey of No. 17 Holborn street, Roxbury, by Mrs. Sarah K. Souther of Belmont.

Mrs. Souther alleges in her complaint that Mrs. Hennessy bought a plot of land bordering one owned by her on Holborn street. In excavating for the foundation Mrs. Souther alleges that her land was weakened. Mrs. Hennessy erected a wall, part of which is alleged to have been on Souther land. The wall collapsed last January. According to Mrs. Souther, Mrs. Hennessey threw the debris on the Souther lawn and refused to repair the wall. In addition to damages she asks that her neighbor be compelled to build a new wall.

UNKNOWN'S BODY FOUND IN SUGAR DOCK

The body of a man was picked up by the harbor police of the American Sugar Refining Company's dock, South Boston, to-day and taken to the morgue to await identification. The body was that of a man about 5 feet 9 inches in height, weighing 200 pounds. It was clad in a light blue shirt and blue overalls.

THOUSANDS ON COMMON SEEK FOR TREASURE

Clews in Hidden, Not Lost, Story Quickly Taken Up by American Readers.

The response to the declaration of "The Money Man" that something of great value would be found in the great "Hidden Not Lost" contest every day this week, Boston Common was crowded yesterday by excited money hunters.

Immediately following the issuance of the first Key Edition, shortly after the noon hour, 500 men, women and boys who had gathered about the AMERICAN office, No. 89 Summer street, in order to get early papers, made a rush for the Common.

They were joined by hundreds more on the way, who had purchased AMERICANS at other distributing points, and within a very short time there were thousands circling about the Soldiers' Monument. Many of them were women, and they searched with just as much eagerness as the men and boys.

Keen Hunters Find Gold.

It was only a few minutes until it became known that the tip of "The Money Man" was a good one. Money was picked up here and there, just as it was predicted it would be by the keen hunters.

"I have found $5," exclaimed one man. Immediately there was a rush to the spot. The man exhibited his discovery. Then invariably more careful search was made of the identical place where the treasure had been picked up.

Of course, nothing more was found right there.

And as the hunt went on all afternoon, one man picked up a cigarette box and was laughed at. He looked inside and threw the laugh on the others by extracting $5.

Most of the afternoon the other clews were passed by. When the Common grew somewhat stale as a gold field, then attention was given to other clews in the story. One of these led to the park in front of the Franklin Square House. Daniel Shea of No. 24 Hamilton place was the successful follower of this clew and got $10.

Get So Near and Yet So Far.

The Castle Island clew attracted a great crowd yesterday and there were a large number making a search about Fort Independence to-day. That clew has not been run down yet, although many persons have had their fingers almost on it. It is a rich clew.

Gold hunters are again requested not to harm anything. Do not trespass on private property. Nothing is hidden on private property. Do not deface or otherwise injure monuments. This is not necessary for the recovery of treasure.

1000 PLUMBERS CONVENE IN HUB

Led by the First Corps Coast Artillery Band, the delegates marched from the Hotel Lenox to the convention hall. Governor Guild and Mayor Hibbard spoke.

The officers are: President, T. A. Hill; vice-president, W. F. Hafer of Milwaukee; secretary, Thomas Cochrane, jr., of New York, and treasurer, William McCoach of Philadelphia.

Raw Milk—Like Raw Meat—Is Unfit Food

Milk is an ideal breeding place for germs. One disease germ left in milk a few hours, will multiply itself into millions. That is one reason—the chief of the many why millions use Van Camp's Milk.

In Washington, D. C., it was recently found that 11 per cent of the dealers sold tubercular milk.

Seven per cent of the milk, from 400 samples, proved fatal to guinea pigs. The pigs, when fed with it, died of consumption.

Dr. Morse of New York states that two-thirds the mortality of children is due to impure milk.

For this reason, immigrant babies, when they arrive in New York, are fed on Van Camp's Milk.

You can all get that same milk—the milk that authorities know to be safe. Do you think it wise, in view of all you know, to continue the use of raw milk?

A Germless Milk.

Van Camp's is a germless milk.

Every cow is inspected—so are the men who milk them. No tubercular cows, no diseased milkmen, convey their infections to Van Camp's Milk.

Our dairies are sanitary. Our factories, where the milk is evaporated, are built without wood. We make a business of cleanliness.

Then the milk is sterilized after the cans are sealed. Not a germ of any kind can remain in it.

Compare that with milkman's milk.

A single germ, left in milk a few hours, breeds millions of others like it. So there are myriads of germs in every drop of raw milk.

If the cow is tubercular, there are germs of consumption. If the milk cans are washed in impure water, there are germs of typhoid.

If the milkman is diseased, or the dairy uncleanly, the infections are bound to be conveyed in the milk.

A very large share of the illness in the world is known to be due to milk.

All of these dangers are wiped out completely when a home adopts Van Camp's Milk.

Whole, Rich Milk.

Van Camp's is simply rich Holstein milk, with two-thirds the water evaporated. Nothing is altered, nothing added—no sugar, no starch, no preservative.

This is not like condensed milk, which is half sugar. Van Camp's is nothing but milk.

Analysis will show about 30 per cent of solids, of which 8 per cent is butter fat.

Compare that with milkman's milk. Milk that stands awhile separates. The butter fat rises and the solids fall. So you get one kind of milk from the top of the milk can—another when served from the middle. From no part of the can do you get the whole milk.

That's why raw milk never gives in cooking the flavor you get from Van Camp's.

For Milk Dishes.

Once use Van Camp's in making a milk dish and you will never again be content with raw milk.

The deliciousness will be a surprise to you, for raw milk was never so rich.

The sole reason is this: In Van Camp's you are getting the whole, rich milk—all of the butter fat, all of the solids. You get nothing else, for Van Camp's is nothing but milk.

Please write to us for our Cook Book, telling how to make all sorts of milk dishes and giving the cost of each.

A Cow in the Kitchen.

Van Camp's means a cow in your kitchen. Rich milk or cream always on hand when wanted.

Yet it's cheaper than milkman's milk.

Van Camp's is as thick as thick cream. So thick that you add one part water for coffee. Yet it doesn't cost half what you pay your milkman for cream.

Add two parts water and you have rich milk. The cost of such milk, when you buy Van Camp's by the case, runs about six cents per quart.

Then you have no waste—no milk left over. That saving alone is enormous. So the home that uses Van Camp's Milk spends less than the home that doesn't.

Safe for Children.

But the delicious cooking—the convenience, the economy—are facts of the least importance. The greatest fact is that children can safely drink Van Camp's.

Raw milk, like raw meat, is an unfit food, because of the danger of germ infection. You will not give such milk to your children after you know Van Camp's.

Van Camp's, when drunk cold, has a slight almond flavor, due to sterilization. This flavor itself is delicious. But it means more than goodness. It means that the milk is pure—that it is germless. It means that a child can drink all it wants without a thought of infection. A child cannot do that with raw milk.

Van Camp's Milk comes in 5 and 10-cent cans—at your grocer's. One can is sufficient to prove every claim. After that, buy a case or two at a time, so as to have it always on hand. Grocers give discounts on cases.

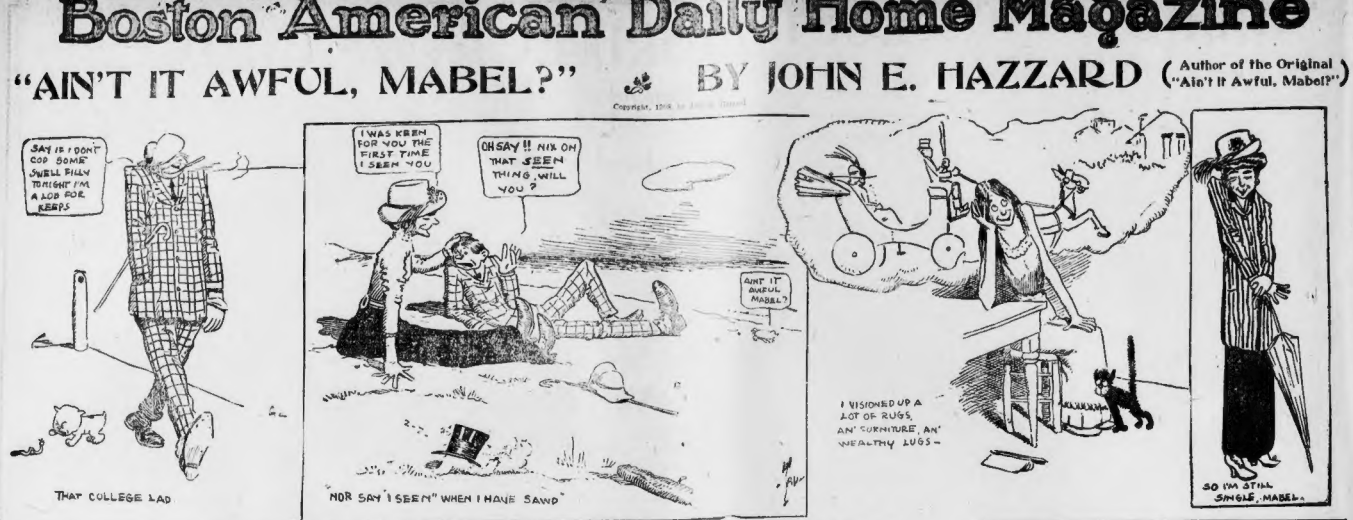
"AIN'T IT AWFUL, MABEL?" BY JOHN E. HAZZARD (Author of the Original "Ain't It Awful, Mabel?")

Copyright, 1908, by John Hazzard



SAY IS I DON'T COP SOME SWELL FILLY TONIGHT I'M A LOB FOR KEEPS
I WAS KEEN FOR YOU THE FIRST TIME I SEEN YOU
OH SAY!! NIX ON THAT SEEN THING, WILL YOU?
AIN'T IT AWFUL MABEL?
I VISIONED UP A LOT OF RUGS, AN' FURNITURE, AN' WEALTHY LUGS—
THAT COLLEGE LAD
NOR SAY 'I SEEN' WHEN I HAVE SAWD
SO I'M STILL SINGLE, MABEL.

Say, kid, you know that college lad?
Well, honest, that boy ain't half bad;
And gee! the roll of dough he had!
Ain't it awful, Mabel?

He's only got nine motor cars—
One of his own and eight of his pa's.
He's that polite that it almost jars.
Ain't it awful, Mabel?

He speaks of sendin' me abroad,
And says I mustn't say "My Gawd."
Nor say "I seen" when I have sawd.
Ain't it awful, Mabel?

Can you see me when I come back,
And I've assumed that Frenchy knack
That somehow now I seem to lack?
Isn't it frightful, Mabelle?

Say, kid, I think I'm stung again;
I'm losin' all my faith in men.
It's time fer me to holler "When!"
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

You know that child in arms I drew?
Well, his affection grew an' grew—
It looked like me fer pastures new.
Ain't it awful, Mabel?

I visioned up a lot of rugs,
An' furniture, an' wealthy lugs—
A home up near them social bugs.
Ain't it awful, Mabel?

He asked his papa—crazy dope—
Fer his permission to elope.
O' course, his papa answered "Nope."
So I'm still single, Mabel.

Husbands I Have Met

Sidelights on Matrimony by a Sympathetic Spinster

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE DOMESTIC BOSS

THE spinster lady was speaking one day in the country. The hostess was a woman of thirty; the host a man of nearly sixty.

The former was a bit of quick silver, vivacious and charming. The latter was pompous and fussy to a degree that was maddening.

He evidently considered that he had a genius for managing things, for all day long he fretted and fumed and bossed.

In the morning his wife and guest made themselves comfortable in a shady corner of the piazza. No sooner were they settled than he arrived on the scene, and never rested until he moved them to what he considered a more desirable spot.

They had decided that they would go bathing just before dinner. He insisted that they go before luncheon instead.

Meant to Be Kind

"I am going to take Mary out in the motor and show her the cliff road," said the wife.

"Much better take her down the Bethany road. There's a fine view from the cliffs along there."

"Yes, but she has always heard so much about the cliff road, and is so anxious to see it."

"Now, my dear, I am quite sure that Mrs. Merry will get much more pleasure out of seeing the Bethany road, and it's another going for nine machine."

Needless to say, the Bethany road was the day.

The little man meant to be kind, but he quite succeeded in being exceedingly tiresome.

He followed his wife around, putting wraps about her that she didn't need, commanding the wife looked at him with a look of desperation that said as plainly as though she had spoken, "Oh, please let me alone for just one little minute!"

He had a pompous little way of taking the words out of one's mouth and giving them quite another meaning than that originally intended.

"He is just as good and kind as he can be," said the wife to the spinster lady, "and if he would only do half as much as once in a while I would be a very happy woman."

"But I can't go to town for a day that he does not want to plan how I shall spend every minute; and when I get home I must account for every minute of the day."

Never Left Alone

"It must be hard," said the spinster lady sympathetically, "for if there is one thing more than another it is to be constantly tagged and fussed over."

"I am never alone for a minute, and I am not even allowed to do anything. Just as I would like to do it," said the young wife. "I may spend as much as I like on my clothes, but he must choose the material and style. Sometimes I am so vexed laugh, it is almost too ridiculous. Your coming here would be a special pleasure for me. I have looked forward to it for weeks; how much have we been of each other?"

"Not very much," agreed the spinster lady, who was indeed the truth; for the fussy and too attentive husband had been left them alone for a minute.

"Well," said the spinster lady that night, as she thought over the events of the day, "Nettie has a lovely home and lots of money, but if I had that fussy pompous little man for a husband, I'd run away far away that he would never never catch up with me. He is enough to drive a woman crazy."

The Traveling Hat

Traveling hats are of a flat sailor type, trimmed simply with a bouquet of violets or cowslips or some other small flower. Sometimes they are of the strictly walking order, trimmed at the left side with a bow of watered ribbon. These large shapes are bright to the fashion, large loques, too, are made of straw, and these are adorned by a wreath of flowers round the hat. Very large satins shapes sit well on the head and are trimmed with a huge wing of a drapery round the crown.

Bobbie's Slate---By William F. Kirk

His Pa Got Slung by a Little Taxicab Clock, Then Got Away in a Hurry

THE picter on my slint to is the Tax-I-Cab. There is only, the driver in the picter. Pa is inside of the theater with Ma and me. Pa had a fite with the Driver of the Taxi-Cab & went into the theater very fast, faster than Ma and me.

We was having dinner at a very nice plais & someone had gaiv Pa some tickets to a show. So Pa was feeling pritty good after he had his dinner & he said Well, wife, let us cut you before eight o'clock & get down to the theater, so as to get there in 10 miles which will be eighty cents & cost me 1 dollar for eighty cent cents. That will be grate, ed Ma, you are very thoughtful, dearest. So Pa & Ma & me all got in the taxi-Cab.

As we was going thru the park on the way down to the Theater Pa said, Well, well, this is what I call living. Here I am riding in a fine carrage for miles and Pa, with there old worn out horses & there old rattle trap.

They was charge at least a dollar & a half, Pa said, & this gentleman is driving down to the show won't charge more than forty cents a mile. Ha ha, he is a jolly fellow, smart & intelligent, and Pa, of as much interest as I am.

Pa Remembers About Rushia

I always remember, said Pa, wet I am riding in a ottomobeel, the last time I was in St. Petersburg, Rushia. I was a prince of the regal Blood. I don't know I was cut to the good that time & I had forgotten my dress suit.

The driver of the car, Pa said, had on a swell dress suit, & as he was a man of exackly my size, having a most powerful & graceful build, Pa said, he offered to loan me his dress suit. So we traded suits in the car, Pa said, & I had a grate time at the ball, dancing with three Princesses & a Russian countess.

Unfortunately, said Pa, even I got thru talking & have never seen the driver since, so I don't know what size suit he wears.

Pa said, wen I was in Paris, I hired a hansom Taxi-cab & told the driver to take me to the Bois de Boulogne, with as you may know, is hard by the Exciting Quarter of Paris.

Just as we was almost there some drivers of a auto-mobeel out the back ane of mine & cut in on me very agressive, and Pa, I was a prince of the regal Blood. I don't blaim them for thinking it, said Pa, because I was cut to the good that time & looked like a prince if ever a man did.

The brain driver of the car, Pa said, saw the bomb running & threw out his arm & knocked the bomb away. It blew off his arm, said Pa, but I only lost five (5) thousan franks to git a new arm.

While Pa was telling Ma & me all these stories we was getting almost to the theater, & wen we got there Pa helped Ma & me out & said to the driver Here, my good man, is ninety cents, eighty cents for the cab & a dime for a good cigar.

Three dollers & twenty cents, said the man. No, said Pa, it is two miles at forty cents a mile.

Three dollers & 20 cents, the man said again. Dig it up quick, said the man, I can't wait here all night.

This is a outrage, said Pa, how do you makk it so much? Can't you reed what it says on the little clock, sed the driver.

Right miles at 40 cents a mile is three dollers & twenty. Didsent you ever ride in one of these things before? the driver asked Pa, in a angry voice.

Hom in the Subway

I will never pay it, sed Pa. You are a theef. All of yours kind is theeves.

Dig it up, sed the driver. You are a theef. All of yours kind is theeves.

Pa, if I may, I will call you a cab. Ma said, in a frite. Pa, you know you are a enery child, sed the driver, wen Pa was in the subway.

Wen Pa was called a cheap skait by the driver of the car, Pa said, he was so shocked to go away. Git out of that taxi-cab & call me that agayne, said Pa. Pa & Ma & me went hom in the Subway.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

BY THE PROFESSOR

DISFIGURING NOSE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am a lady, twenty-one years of age, and have a rather large and hooked nose. Have been informed by face specialists can correct such disfigurements, and would be very grateful if you or you would let me know through your columns whether or not this treatment is dangerous, and if there are any after effects from same.

H. F.

BEAUTY surgeons do much in the way of correcting abnormal features, but the ordinary beauty specialist does nothing in the way of surgery could have little or no effect in your case. There should be no after effects from the treatment if you got a surgeon who knows his business.

STIFF UNRULY HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Please tell me of something that will make my hair soft, as it is very stiff and will not stay as I comb it, especially when wet. Also please tell me if there is anything that will cure dandruff, as I have tried almost everything. I have tried two doctors' prescriptions, but got no results.

A YOUNG MAN

TRY the curling treatment as often outlined in this column. Massage the scalp with a very few drops of vaseline in every night and brush the hair a great deal. After a while it will get into the habit of staying where you comb it. As for curing pimples you can never do so by external remedies alone, for the pimple is only an outward expression of something wrong internally. The blood has received some foreign matter from some source or other, and that must be eliminated through the pores of the skin. If the oxidation of the refuse matter in the lungs is not sufficient to burn out this matter, the pores are given a chance to do so, and it comes out in the form of pus. Unless you can destroy the source of this trouble you cannot permanently cure the pimples. Perhaps you did not give the doctor's prescription sufficient trial, as for a time it would probably pass off more of the refuse matter, and you would think it was doing harm instead of good. Try the doctor again.

FOR LIVER SPOTS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Kindly advise what will cure brown spots on the face, commonly called "liver blotches." They show up much more plainly in Summer than Winter.

C. S.

TRY the following bleach: Three drams of citric acid, eleven ounces of hot water, two drams of borax and one ounce of glycerin. Put the borax and the acid in the water to dissolve. When it is cold add the glycerin and perfume with rose extract. Apply to the face and neck at night and let it remain on all night. Then apply again in the morning, unless it irritates the surface, in which case apply only at night or soothe with cold cream.

BY ELECTRIC NEEDLE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am twenty-one years old and have two moles on the side of my face. Will you tell me some way to get rid of them myself or tell me how I can have them removed?

V. S.

THE most satisfactory way to get rid of moles is to have them destroyed by the electric needle. This, if properly done, leaves no scar and destroys the moles so that they do not return. You cannot do this yourself and should be very careful to find an operator who knows her business.

Guarding Baby Against Insects

A FEW oil bubbles seem perfectly indifferent to the swarms of flies which light on them. Their presence is a matter that should not be regarded flibbly by the mother. For flies, as has been proved, are one of the greatest sources of contagion, and too much care cannot be taken to prevent them from lighting on anything which the baby is likely to take in his mouth.

As to the means to prevent this pest, baby should be kept scrupulously clean, and his clothing should be hung over an open window every day. The bars of the room where the baby is placed as well as the sides of little cage for him, should be wiped with a damp cloth every morning. A few drops of oil of lavender in a bottle of water sprinkled about the room before the baby is put to bed will help to keep away flies.

Another thing that should not be neglected is the question of boracic acid. Boracic acid is a solution of boracic acid in water, and is a powerful antiseptic. Its use is very simple. Dissolve a teaspoonful of boracic acid in a pint of water and wash baby's face and hands with it. Also wash his mouth with it, and if he is old enough to rinse his mouth with it, so much the better. Boracic acid is also a splendid thing to wash baby's eyes with, and if he has any sore spots on his body, wash them with it.

Mothers of Great Men

The Determined, Devoted Mother of Walt Whitman

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY

WALT WHITMAN is no longer an experiment. From the day on which he published his "Leaves of Grass," in 1855, to the day on which he died, in 1892, Whitman steadily grew in the esteem of the intellectually courageous, and to-day the "good gray poet" is generally recognised as having been one of the kings of thought, ranking well up with the greatest of the sons of men.

Because he was so great and original and virile, Whitman for a long time shocked the "weak sisters" of the reading public, but a deep familiarity with him showed that he was as pure as he was powerful, and that the "filleses" of his writings lay chiefly in the misconception of the reader.

Whitman set out to sing "man as man," man as God has made him, and believing with the Bible, that in man there is nothing impure or unclean," he gave his manse long, strong voice without regard full rein and galloped on without regard to the false modesty of the public.

A Sublime Idealist

So far from having been materialistic and unclean in his life and writings, Walt Whitman was one of the purest of men and, withal, one of the sublimest of the idealists of all time.

He saw profundities as it has been given to but few of the sons of men to see them; and the entire burden of his muse was to reveal the fact that, back of the passing show, back of the strange "bitter sweet" called life, back of the great human world with its joy and sorrow, its failure and success, its hatreds of great heart and eclipse in sensual mire," worked the sovereign purpose whose name is righteousness.

Whitman shocked men at first simply because he told them the truth in plain, direct, honest language, never mincing matters, never resorting to any attempt at circumlocution or concealment.

What God had made he frankly declared and declared so clearly and forcibly that no one could misunderstand him.

It is not too much to say that Walt Whitman is one of the immortals, and that his "Leaves of Grass" and his "Specimen Days and Collects" are destined from now on to hold their place among the supreme masterpieces of the human mind.

Endowed by Mother

It makes no difference whether one calls them "poetry" or "prose;" the fact remains that they have in them the elements of perpetuity, and all because they deal in a real human way with the things that will always have a deep and thrilling human interest.

His father, Walter Whitman, carpenter and builder, was just an ordinary man. The brain of the family, the courage of heart and soul that is at the bottom of all real greatness, was confined to the mother—she of the "old race of the Netherlands," as yace that has written in his own unexcampable blood the finest page in all history.

Reading Mother's "Rise of the Dutch Republic," you may see Walt Whitman—the Walt Whitman that was to be—upon every page—in the amazing sincerity and honesty, in the directness of thought and act which went straight to the mark, without so much as a side glance at possible consequences, in the godlike courage which never faltered when duty thundered its commands.

The blood that made the Dutch Republic was the blood that flowered in the veins of Louisa Van Velsor, and that blood it was that fashioned the brain of Walt Whitman, making him honest, frank, thorough, absolutely fearless, the teller of the truth and the whole truth, no matter how much it shocked.

Encouraged Her Son

It was from his mother that Walt got his first encouragement in the way of literature.

When he began writing his "poetry" many, even of his intimate friends, were inclined to laugh; but his mother did not laugh.

There was Longfellow, a very famous man, whose productions, especially his "Hiawatha," were upon everybody's tongue; and to her boy Mrs. Whitman said, "Never up, Walt! 'Hiawatha' is poetry, then I reckon yours is."

This little bit of good cheer may serve as a criticism of the mother's attitude toward Walt when he was "on trial." She stood by him, faithfully and well.

She had given him the brain and character that God had given her, and in addition she gave him the world of mother love and encouragement which, no doubt, helped him mightily to win his fight.

And Then She Broke the Rule

THE young matron embroidering the centrepiece regarded for an instant her four-year-old son at the other end of the porch, and then continued the conversation.

"No," she said, "I make it a point never to lose my temper with Donelson. He is a very sensitive child, and I aim never to hurt his feelings. I am just as particular as if he were grown up. I am always patient with him."

"How nice!" murmured the other young woman, who was making a bead bag.

"He is a very intelligent child," pursued his mother, "and I don't pick the leaves off that vine."

"Why?" asked the small boy.

"I am so glad you came over this afternoon," went on the young woman with the centrepiece.

"Maybe," shrieked Donelson. "Why can't I pick the leaves off the vine?"

"Because you mustn't," said his mother, firmly. "Run and play with your cars."

"I want a cookey," said Donelson.

"Not now," said his mother.

"Why not?" he asked, dancing up and down. "Why can't I have a cookey?"

"Donelson," said his mother, "I want you to go and play and let me talk to Aunt Mary. Poor Aunt Mary, who came way over here——"

Trouble Brewing

"Why can't I have a cookey?" insisted her son.

"I'll just ignore him," said his mother to her guest. "I don't see why he should behave so particularly bad to-day. Did——"

"I want a cookey," said Donelson.

His mother put down her work and procured her son the desired liquid refreshment.

"I must tell you about Dell's engagement," began the young woman with the bead bag.

"Mamma!" said Donelson, hanging on her knee and twisting his feet. "Why—I—I can't have a cook——"

His mother got up. "My son," she said, "you are going to stay here and play with your cars. Now, mind mother."

For an instant there was peace.

"Mamma!" he called. "Can I pick one leaf from the vine? Or two leaves? Or three leaves? Mamma, can I?"

"No!" said his mother. "As I was saying——"

"Why can't I pick leaves from the vine?" Donelson wailed.

The young matron with the centerpiece regarded him pleasantly. "If you make it a point never to frown at him," she told her guest, "Donelson will be called." I want you to be quiet and stop asking me questions. Remember I did not——"

"Mamma," said Donelson, "can I jump off the porch?"

"Certainly not!" said his mother. "You'd hurt yourself and ruin the flower bed, too! You may play like a good boy——"

"I want a cookey!" he cried. "An' why can't I jump?"

"Won't he stop if you scold—oh, I forgot that you don't scold him," said the young woman rocking the bead bag.

"I sighed his mother said, "really don't see what ails him to-day. Usually he is such a sensible, contented little Donelson! What did I tell you about that vine?"

"Why can't I pick the leaves?" insisted "An' why——"

"Hear me," cried his mother, getting to her feet. "It really makes me nervous to have him continually asking why. But in fact I like him to let him suffer from my nervousness! Darling, why don't you be a good boy and mind mother? Why don't you?"

"I want a cooky," said her son, violently "Why can't I have a cooky? An' why——"

Very Sensible

The young matron walked to the steps and called out into space. Then she turned to the small boy hanging on her skirts.

"Darling," she said, in a sweet, controlled tone, as which her guest marvelled, "you can't pick the leaves or have a cooky or jump off the porch. Understand? And I don't want you to ask me why again. It pains mother and makes her head ache."

"No," said Donelson, reluctantly.

"You see you're very naughty," said the mother. "If I talk reasonably to him——"

"Why can't I have a cooky?" broke in Donelson, passionately.

There was an electric instant of repression, and then the fair young matron grasped Donelson, turned him over her knee and spanked him, then set him down in a chair, where he remained breathless and subdued and voiceless at last.

"I may be wrong," said his mother, tremulously, "but I couldn't stand it another minute! How on earth can I forgive myself for doing such a thing?"

"Don't try," said her beaming guest. "You don't need forgiveness—it's congratulations you draw this time."

"HIDDEN—NOT LOST"

Clews to Other Concealed Treasure in This Instalment of the Story.

By "The Money Man."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

WALTER SINCLAIR, a young business man from Cleveland, meets a woman of regal beauty in Boston. She gives her name as Madame Alvarez. Sin is generous and is pursued by enemies. She induces Sinclair to promise to aid her. He gets a chauffeur named Dalton and a red automobile to help out.

The woman is pursued by two men and a woman, who claim to be Dr. Malthus, proprietor of a sanitarium, and his assistants, Dr. Hermel and Rose Ferrati. Dr. Malthus says that Madame Alvarez is insane, that she escaped from his hospital and stole jewels valued at $150,000 from a Back Bay family.

Madame Alvarez has secreted the jewels in Sinclair's bewildered mind, after which she becomes to Sinclair a raving maniac, she supposed him to avoid arrests. He has his package sent to the office of Dr. Malthus to dine after the doctor had told him that he could tell him something about the missing package.

Dr. Malthus impressed on Sinclair the story that the police were after Madame Alvarez, and that it were better that the hiding place of the jewel box be disclosed, and that her whereabouts be made known before she and himself were arrested.

Marion Marston, Sinclair's fiancee, frightened at Sinclair's non-appearance, had gone to Boston from Cleveland. He was unable to find them. Returning to his hotel he found Dalton with the motor car, and a man, between them they overpowered him and threatened, just as the ragged man who had previously come from Madame Alvarez reappeared with a message from her.

Madame Alvarez authorized Sinclair to open the package in his possession, follow the instructions it contained and secure hidden articles that she had hidden. He opened the package and found that it contained blank paper. The package had been in the hands of Dr. Malthus. Sinclair sought Dalton, his wounded chauffeur, and he told him that the enemies of Madame Alvarez had buried something in the Old Colony Trust Company's vaults.

Sinclair discovered the secret vault, digging at the foot of a tree unearthed a jewel box. On a magnificent ring of jewelry it contained he found the inscription, "Verna, Queen of Malrovia." Returning to his hotel he found waiting for him Dr. Malthus.

Malthus drew a revolver on Sinclair, but the latter was unexpectedly kept from harm by the sudden appearance from another room of a man who leveled a pistol at Malthus and forced him to drop his weapon.

Malthus told Sinclair that Madame Alvarez was the legal heir to the throne of Malrovia, and that when she had fled her country she took with her not only the crown jewels, but about all of the money in the treasury.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"YES," continued Malthus, "it is the lure of that treasure which for years has led me from one end of the earth to the other. It is that for which I have risked imprisonment and death itself, and I give you fair warning that I will dare anything in order to lay my hands on the key to the cipher which holds the secret of those jewels, those gold pieces and those government securities. Once in my possession my life of perpetually dodging the police will be over and I shall be free to enjoy the ease and luxury so long coveted."

Through this remarkable recital and for some time after the close Sinclair sat almost in a daze of half belief. There were many facts which seemed to bear out the truth—the royal crest and the initials on the card which had summoned him to his first interview with Madame Alvarez, the reverence which the man with the revolver had shown her, the magnificent brooch with its French inscription, and most of all the regal bearing of the woman herself. All these and many other things seemed to prove that Madame Alvarez was, as Malthus said, the rightful Queen of Malrovia, forced into exile by her enemies, but clever enough to have carried with her treasure of priceless value which might yet enable her to gain the throne.

The story was all plausible enough, but it was so far apart from anything his experience had ever known that it required an effort to give it even passing credence. Could it be that he, a business man whose life heretofore had been nothing if not prosaic, was actually the confidential agent of a woman of royal blood, the legal claimant to a throne? It was an idea pleasant enough to think about and one which relieved him of many worries, but it seemed so preposterous that he could hardly believe he would not soon awaken to find it all only a fanciful dream.

Rouse From Reverie.

The voice of Malthus, sounding faint and far away, aroused him from his reverie.

"Some of my companions," said Malthus, "are actuated by entirely different motives. They want to defeat Madame Alvarez in order to win power for their own families and to save their native land from what they fancy will be a rule of tyranny. As for me I care not one whit whether Verna ever becomes queen or not. I want the treasure which she has in her possession, and once I lay my hands on it I will laugh at her and all the rest of the world."

"But what if I should telephone to the police and tell them what you have told me?" queried Sinclair.

"You would not do such a thing as that for many reasons. First, because unless I am greatly mistaken Madame Alvarez has had the foresight to ask you to avoid at all hazards giving the police any knowledge of this affair. For reasons which are too long to explain this sight of hers must be conducted secretly. If it were made an international affair it would result in certain ruin for her hopes. Moreover, I hardly think that a man in your position would welcome the newspaper notoriety which would follow the minute you reported any phase of such a matter to the police."

Malthus smiled shrewdly and Sinclair reddened at the realization that all he had said was true. This soldier of fortune had nothing to fear from his wife's threat of police interference. The game of wits with a fortune and a queen's scepting the prizes, must be played through without any outside interference and at this stage of the game so far as Sinclair could see, neither side had much if any advantage over the other.

Sinclair saw nothing to be gained by continuing this unusual interview any longer, and so, rising, he said:

"Mr. Malthus, I appreciate very much what I feel reasonably sure has been a frank statement on your part. It partially compensates for some less pleasant treatment I have suffered at your hands. Now that I know the real identity of Madame Alvarez I shall be all the more eager to keep the word I have given her and I give you fair warning that I will do everything in my power to bring her a triumphant victory over you and her other foes."

Shook Hands as Friends.

The two men, who an hour before had been ready to shoot each other, shook hands with the apparent cordiality of warm friends, and Malthus took his leave.

"I would give a good deal," said Sinclair with a chuckle as the door closed on his visitor, "to see the expression on my friend Malthus's face when he finds the box buried at the foot of the elm gone."

Sinclair then took stock of the situation. He recalled much of the conversation he had overheard within the past few exciting days. Some of it related apparently to hidden treasure. He remembered this:

"Frog Pond—gold—it grows in the grass, in the water, in the air."

That certainly meant something, the man ruminated.

"All aboard for the Dry City!"

Sinclair thought a while and then smiled. The biggest dry city in the world was Boston.

Then there was that big Castle Island clew. It had been so thoroughly sifted and yet—It is to laugh!

"I have got to hear from that clew pretty soon," he said to himself, "or it will be no good."

THE STURDIEST peoples of the earth drink beer—drink it from childhood to age. And those are the peoples who suffer least from nervousness and from dyspepsia.

When one needs more vitality, the Doctor says "drink beer."

The barley is food; the hops are a tonic. The trifle of alcohol is an aid to digestion.

The proper drinking of beer—but not the abuse of it—is good for the weak and the well. And not the least of the good comes through flushing the system; in getting rid of the waste.

But a beer to be healthful needs to be pure. And it must be well aged, else the after-result is biliousness.

That is why we are so careful with Schlitz. We double the necessary cost of our brewing to insure absolute purity. And we age the beer for months before marketing.

It gives you the good without the harm.

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
Common beer is sometimes substituted for Schlitz.
To avoid being imposed upon, see that the cork or crown is branded Schlitz.

CINCINNATI, July 14.—This is an off day for the Doves. They originally had a game scheduled with some minor league team in this State, but called it off owing to the poor financial inducements offered.

The Bostons will remain here and take in the game this afternoon between the Brooklyns and Cincinnati teams.

To-night the Bostons will leave for Pittsburg, where they will open a four-game series with the Pirates to-morrow.

The Doves broke even in their four games here. Although one of the two games lost would have resulted in their favor if they had been at all lucky.

In the contest yesterday the Doves made one of the greatest finishes on record. They tied the score with two out in the ninth, and won in the eleventh, 3 to 2.

The Bostons won a majority of games in St. Louis and broke even here, which is going some away from home.

It is doubtful that a team ever made a more exciting finish than that which the Boston Nationals pulled off on the local meadows. For eight innings they hooked before Andy Coakley, the former Holy Cross twirler, as though he were a King. During these rounds but one man reached base, he getting there twice on hits and once on an error, and his name was Bowerman.

Bates Batted for Hannifan.

Manager Keller tried to break the hoodoo by sending Bates in to bat for Hannifan in the eighth inning, but there was nothing doing. In the ninth Fisbeyn was called upon to smite the spinore for Dorner. Same story, nothing doing. Kelley started the fans home by fanning for the second and Tx for all-duly round.

The fact that Bill Dahlen then carved out a single to left did not stop the execution. Bill, when Beaumont came along with a triple, sending had Bill into the counting room, the outfield not having stopped. It did more than that when Bowerman and the boy tried for a base-dashing Beaumont over the rubber with the run that tied the score. Hinchey then called a bingle for himself, because Coakley fouled the ever fled on a roller to Gan gel.

A pass to Browne placed opponents on all the gilded bases, with Bill Sweeney who had succeeded Hannifan, at the bat. Bill's effort was feble, but not feble enough, as Paskert gathering in his line fly after quite a sprint.

Boultes Relieved Dorner.

Jake Boultes then took up the firing line job and in the ninth and tenth innings set the Reds down without an effort.

Then came the eleventh, with its punk baseball and timely hitting, with the awful finale of seeing the winning run forced over the pan on a base on balls and timely hitting. Beaumont started the finish with a single to centre. Coakley fouled on Bowerman's first bun, saving half a run. Ritchey also tried to sacrifice, but only succeeded in forcing Beaumont at second. Bowerman drew a single on his tap to Gunzel beoma Coakley failed to connect with one and the sacks were full. Sweeney then found off a few and finally drew a pass, forcing Bowerman over with what proved to be the winning run. Graham popped out and Boultes fell up a foul fly as the finishers for the Doves.

FRANK LAPORTE, UTILITY MAN OF RED SOX

M'GUIRE'S MEN ARE RECKLESS ON BASES

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

There is such a thing as being too clever on the bases, and that is one of the few faults of the Red Sox. The team, as a whole can run bases as good or better than any other club in the American League, but they often spoil a good start either through carelessness or by having too good an opinion of their ability to get back to the bag when taking a big lead.

How many times have Tommy, Lord and Gessler and some others been caught off a base since the season started? All or twenty times, one would say. And in several instances the play has had a distinct bearing on the result of the game.

This taking too much lead and being caught napping is one of the few things in the Red Sox's play that one can find fault about. Doubtless Manager McGuire has "canned" the offending players many a time since the season opened, but the fault seems hard to cure. Nearly every day the same thing happens.

Of course, when the Red Sox catcher nips an opponent off the bag we all chirp over trouble and say: "Pretty work!" but when the other clubs catch the Red Sox napping the play doesn't seem so humorous. It makes a difference which leg the load is on.

On the whole, however, it is much better to have the players take too much rather than too little lead. Occasionally there is a wild throw that helps the locals, and they are very quick to take advantage of any kind of opening.

RICKARD TO BACK GANS AGAINST DURABLE DANE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 14.—Tex Rickard, who is promoting the Gans-Nelson fight at Ely, Nev., is a strong supporter of the colored fighter. Tex always felt that Gans was the greatest fighter that ever lived, and he feels that way still. To-day he sent a wire to Goldsby's place saying that he had $25,000 which he was ready to place on Gans to win over Nelson in the coming fight. Rickard says with Gans in shape Nelson will not last over twenty rounds.

The Goldfield miner has stirred up great interest in the third battle between Gans and Nelson, and there is every indication that a tremendous crowd will attend the contest. Every one in Nevada will be represented at the fight, and almost every fan who can scare up the coin here will be in Ely when the leading fight-weights do battle.

The fight is looked upon by Nevadans as the greatest advertising scheme that could be had, and are all planning all of their interest into the affair. It is almost certain that Jack Welsh will again referee the mill. He gave entire satisfaction to both Nelson and Gans in the last battle, and his services are desired by Rickard.

Should there will be plenty of money bet on the fight when these men meet again is evident from the feeling shown about sporting headquarters. Despite the fact that Gans lost to Nelson, there are some here who will put the Battler in favorite him. Even money is offered in cases now, and if it likely that the odds will reach at that figure.

McFarland is very much disappointed because of his failure to get on with Jack Coffroth and practically matched Nelson and Packey when Rickard took the big battle. While Coffroth looked upon the McFarland-Nelson go as a fair card, he said Packey's showing against Welch hurt his drawing ability greatly. Coffroth suggested a matching Rudy Unholz and McFarland for a lower date, but Packey seems to care for none of the Boer's game. He is being the "go get a reputation" note to avoid signing with the South African. It looks as though Welch and Packey would step again before Jeff's club.

No Time Lost in Getting Automobiles Under Way To-day

TOURISTS OFF FOR SLOWTOWN

By J. C. KERRISON.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 14.—It was well for those participating in the A. A. A tour that they had enjoyed a day of rest at Bedford Springs or else they would have been pretty well demoralized this morning as a result of the royal welcome and open-handed hospitality extended to them by the motor club of Harrisburg last evening. The local men simply took them into camp and would not let go of them until early this morning, long after they should have been tucked away in their little beds, considering the strenuosity of the work before them.

Governor Stewart of Pennsylvania welcomed the boys and Mayor Meals of Harrisburg gave them the city, and the local club presented each contestant with a hand some stein.

Yesterday was rather a hard day for several of the contestants in both the Glidden and Hower trophy contests. Two items fell by the wayside in the former, while three of the Hower cars lost their perfect scores.

The teams that are tied for the Glidden trophy are: Day State, comprising three Marmon cars; Auto Club of Buffalo, comprising three Pierce cars; Auto Club of Buffalo, completing two Premiers and one Reo; Chicago, Chicago Motor Club, comprising two Haynes, one Oldsmobile; Rochester Club, comprising three Studebakers; Columbus Club, comprising three Pierce-Arrows.

The clean score cars in the Hower are, R. G. Williams, Great Arrow; R. C. Lockwood, Reo; Ed. Hettling, Great Arrow; J. S. Wise, Premier; H. E. Mason, Stoddard Dayton; R. G. Cox, Stoddard Dayton.

The clean score cars which once were team members for the Glidden are Mrs. Robin Coxon, Rambler; H. Burr, Oakland; A. R. Davis, Garford; C. S. Carrie, Franklin; M. S. Rhoda, Franklin; Luther Young, Stevens-Duryea; C. L. Clarke, Stevens-Duryea.

Two Glidden Teams Fail.

The two Glidden teams to fail by the wayside yesterday were the Rochester and Franklin. The former was pulled down by the misfortune of the Franklin in breaking the welding of the spring repaired on the previous day. The latter was thrown from the tie by the Selden having spring trouble and its withdrawing from the tour, although it will continue on the Hower.

In the runabout class the Moline was penalized fifty-one points for being late as a result of a cracked cylinder; the Franklin runabout lost a few points for tardiness, while one of the Overlands broke a spring, and another was driven by Mrs. Shirley failed to report at the close of the day's run.

Taken all in all, yesterday was perhaps the worst day a day will be experienced on the entire run. Tire troubles were indeed numerous, the car in only one event free from being the little Reo, which made seven changes of inner tubes and then finished on a flat tire, still retaining a clean score. The car stood the exacting tests of the endurance runs, and it was of no small moment to Bostonians to see two of its representatives, J. W. Maguire in a Great Arrow and F. E. Wing in a Marmon, enter the city in first and second positions respectively, even though they did not save a single point in that order.

The other Bostonian in the run, R. M. Dunn, in the Studebaker, also showed up well, and the Bay State has reason to be proud of them, even though two of them had a trifling accumulation of other delinquentations. The retirement of Mrs. Shirley from the tour was a genuine disappointment to the tourists, Mrs. Cuneo, and she and her companion and Mrs. Walter C. Marmon have the distinction of being the only women now in the tour.

Even though the present tour is not half over, plans are being perfected or rather considered for the tour of next year, a tentative plan being a tour from some Eastern city to Denver, following along the lines of the present run and avoiding a camp at each night's stop. This idea seems to meet with the approval and appreciation of the men on the tour but it must not be forgotten that the tour is not a year away and many things may happen in that time.

As the tourists pass into closer touch with the East they become more and more cognizant of the fact that they are not befallened for their downfall, four of them being reported on the route of to-day from this city to Philadelphia, a total of 125 miles away, and yet it must honestly be admitted that there is and has been more reckless driving than in any of the runs during the last three or four years, which is proof positive that the game is improving and that the men driving the cars realize that others besides themselves have rights on the highways which are to be respected.

There was no time lost in getting under way this morning, the members of the clean score teams getting away among the first so that they might get a clean road.

A slight little accumulation occurred at the smoker last evening when the local city reporter, H. H. Johnston and David Beecroft with gold watch fobs for their abilities in officiating at the recent endurance test of the club.

BIG GAME AT SOUTH END

A game which is attracting attention will be played on the National League grounds on Saturday between the Olympia A. C., the colored champions of the State, and the William Read & Sons team of Boston. Both teams are among the best semi-professional teams in the State, and a good game should result. The following well-known players will play for the Olympias: G. Bell, Jones, Lewis, Jackson, Hagan, Banks, Johnson and Hall. The Reads: Davis, Jenkins and Wells while William Read & Sons will line up as follows: L. Linberg, 3b.; Byrnes, lf.; J. Linberg, c.f.; Cambella, ss.; Wallace, 1b.; Keane, 2b.; Kieg, r.f.; Morrissey, Nash, Creighton or Barrows, p. Game will be called at 3 p. m.

GARDNER JOINS LYNN CLUB

Gardner, the University of Vermont player, who has been with the Red Sox for the past month, has joined the Lynn team of the New England League to-day. The deal for this player's services has been under way for some time, but was only closed to-day.

Gardner is a likely looking youngster, but needs a season or two in the minor leagues before he will be ready for fast company.

THORNTON RETAINS TITLE.

ATLANTA, July 14.—Nat Thornton of Atlanta retained the singles title of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association by defeating Whitehead of Virginia in the challenge round.

BASEBALL NIGHT AT TREMONT

To-night will be baseball night at the Tremont. Manager B. C. Whitney, author of "A Knight For a Day," the gaiety now running at the theatre, has invited the Detroit players to attend the performance as a body, and it is hinting the Bostonians harder than ever before in his diamond career. Although he has never seen a game without a hit, has a batting mark of .263, being the topnotcher of the Newark team.

BRUSH IS AFTER ENGLE.

Newark, July 14.—John T. Brush, president of the New York National League Club, has authorized Manager John McGraw to do all in his efforts to get Purchase Clyde Engle, the big third baseman of the Boston Nationals. Engle, who is an outfielder, has played third base all of this season, and he is hitting the ball harder than ever before in his diamond career, although he has never seen a game without a hit, has a batting mark of .263, being the topnotcher of the Newark team.

TOUGH AUTO LAW.

A bill has been introduced into the Louisiana State Legislature providing for the registration, regulation and identification of automobiles in the State. The measure provides that every automobile must be registered with the Secretary of State, and a license fee for each car being fixed at $1. Speeding is prohibited, the provisions containing one month's imprisonment, Asbestos, Insomnia and Nervous Debility. If it doesn't cure you, New York Sanitarium Co., 149 Washington st., and 136 Portland st.

SWEET MARIE AND MAY EARL NOT TO RACE

A Lexington dispatch states that Trainer Mike Bowerman has accepted a challenge to race May Earl against Sweet Marie, and that the challenge was first proposed by W. J. Andrews, the trainer of Sweet Marie.

In reply Andrews denies the Lexington report, but says that there has been some talk of giving a purse for the two trotters mentioned at Cleveland. He says:

"The idea of matching May Earl, a trotter of unknown quantity, against the champion of all champions, Sweet Marie, is absurd.

"Why May Earl, with her record of 2:10¼, should even be considered a match for a third-class trotter is to me beyond the stand. She started last season in eight races and won only three, taking her mark at Terre Haute, and the only winning heats averaged slower than 2:14. The only thing the trotting horse world has heard of this mare is what has been made public by her owners through the trials reported from Lexington training grounds.

"The fact that Mike Bowerman won some time last year by driving Sweet Marie, champion three-year-old colt, General Watts, 2:06¾, is evidently the only excuse for talk of a race between another trotter trained by him and Sweet Marie. In spite of the fact that such talk only gives it the appearance of plain hippodroming for little gain and some cheap publicity.

BOSTON Y. C. LEADERS.

CAPE PORPOISE, Me., July 14.—The fleet of the Boston Yacht Club, on the run from the Isles of Shoals to Cape Porpoise, had the wind from almost every point of the compass. On the run of twenty-three and a half miles the leaders of the three classes were the same as Sunday, the Shiyess in the first class, the Marie in the second, and the Clique in the third class.

LOUGHREY BEAT MARTO.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Young Loughrey of Philadelphia defeated Johnny Marto of this city in their six-round fight at the Castleman A. C.

Notes of the Harness Horses

A great deal of the credit can be given John W. Lineehan in the Dorchester Driving Club having the fourth meeting with fellows. The total of that score was 47½ points to 42½, and each had eight winners of races, no halving or walkover for each. This made the difference in points though the Dorchesters having won more second places in the races of three and more starters than did Fellsway. In Lineehan's race he dropped the fourth heat to Joe Thomas, driven by J. D. Pugsley of the Dorchesters, to have him come around in the summary over Baron S., the Fellsway entry. A pretty piece of club work, as had he not done so the final standing of the meet would have been 43 points for each club.

H. C. Thayer is leading the right way with Alice L., to have him a much more reliable trotter than the dame than once he owned him. This is making him race his heats steadily, no matter whether he happens to be first or not. It may be that Thayer will have to change the method of handling before he can win a race.

Three heats in the 50 seconds is going some, and Fellsway some more, for it was accomplished by Franklin Pilot Sir George, Young Elsie and that, all getting credit for 2:17¼. Sir George, Pilot and Young Elsie are eighteen and seventeen years old, respectively, and Franklin Pilot is a five-year-old.

Will Fitzgerald has made quite a trotter out of Eddie Hopkins' stallion Oakland Alice. She defeated a good field in straight heats in the interclub race at Dorchester on Saturday in 2:17¼. It is a sure fact that speedway events with four horses make the best kind of racing, and that Jan. 1 next will see many of the clubs adopt the number season and the plan will be followed at Dorchester during the season. Several other stations in their racing rules will be made during the coming season.

Every Saturday will be the intensity matinee at the Dorchester, the Fellsway Driving Club will move to Greendale Park, in Worcester. A big delegation is booked to attend from the city to the Connecticut River.

Fred Nolan, president of the Hamilton Driving Club, has been one of the leaders in the movement for the formation of the Long Pointe Club, and is said that Secretary Ed. Sullivan will be on hand to handle the entries for the pacing mare Princess Helen she is taking up trotting. Princess Helen was marked in 2:08 and was timed the last half in 1:02 and finished strong at that.

Louis Miller was pleased to the way his trotter Lou Miller was acting in the work he was giving her over the Dorchester track, and will prove a fast mare by little more attention.

While Lou McDonald, the famous trainer, is winning plenty of races in the Great Western Circuit, his assistant trainer, Joe Ayer, has another string out over the Western half-mile tracks capturing the purses. Last week he won a couple of races, one with Marcelette, owned by Ralph Wetherell.

Paul Medearis, trainer for the Stevens-Duryea Co., of Boston, is getting been the fastest pair of horses in the country. The one is the Thomas was in 2:21, with Cassius Bingen, owned by A. B. Parker.

Tom Nolan has worked the three-year-old infanty stallion Peter Nolan to a record of 2:19¼, and will campaign him in one afternoon in 2:14¾, 2:12¾, and 2:13¾ at the Poughkeepsie track.

All the year critics have been saying that there was no good performers left in the Hambletonian stable, but Commodore Ayer and Highball of Peter the Great 2:07¾, out of Mrs. Jack, 2:24¼, later on to be quite a slipper four-year-old. Has fastest work to date is a mile in 2:16¾.

D. W. Caton of Roxbury has a great string of horses to work at the Dorchester track. One is 2:16¾, that Tiger has been in 2:11¾ with, he is working himself a two-year-old filly in Bonnie that lately turned the course in 2:27, half in 1:11, a couple of five-year-old geldings by Aquilla, 2:18¾, that have been trials in 2:21 and 2:22¼, respectively, and Fury Todd, the colt Mr. Caton had pacing last season, has turned into a trotter and finished off a mile in 2:22, well within himself.

Charmon, 2:07¾, the racing gelding owned by W. J. McDevitt, that was one of the cup winners in the Metropolitan Driving Club series of spring matinees was led by George M. Atwood's Lancaster, N. H., and has the fastest record of any horse bred in New Hampshire. No other pacer, either, has won a half-mile heat over a speedway in the remarkable time of 57¾, and was the first Claymore recently accomplished on the Dorchester road at Cedar River.

A couple of two-year-olds in Kentucky have been timed in 2:24¼, and better, which will be a mark for the Kentucky Futurity. Lord Derby defeated McKenna and the other Spencer Todd.

Ben L. Bresee of Newton has charge of the stable of horses in charge of Trainer Ed. Ireland. Mr. Bresee has a pacing gelding by Aquilla, Dr. Hand, 2:18¾; Prince Alfonso, 2:21; Guy F., 2:21¾, and others.

Walter Corbin's old speedway trotting mare, Lucy Todd, 2:17¼, by Todd, out of Harry Bean, owned by C. B. Spencer of Newton, and bred by Walter Corbin, is a dandy.

Prince Todd, 2:08¾, was the first trotter to defeat Dan Patch, when he drove in a grand Circuit race and from what he reported still have a wonderful turn of speed, as a few days ago he pulled a mile in 2:11, last half in 1:04¼, and he had the final quarter in thirty seconds.

Commodore Ayer, 2:07¾, has sold his trotting mare Peter Pot Pilter, 2:10¾, to parties in Providence, R. I., and will be driven by him. Her new owner won in six heats over a good field at Narragansett.

George Hill of Brookline has bought 2:18¾, Aylesboro trainer and driver, the property of Mrs. Ayer, and intends racing him over the two-lapped tracks.

Fast work is expected in Chicago is seen a lot of speed in the matinee races. The pacer Dom Pedro, 2:02¼, is the best in the trailers for marching the length of the course in fifty-nine seconds, and the pacer Ed. Sweet, 2:04¾, is said to be a full half-mile.

Ed. Geers has a good third, pacer, with Senorita, 2:04¾, and Lou Dillon, 2:01¼, is the fastest trotter in training, 2:15¼, while with Rey del Diablo he has a wonderful performance of the horses on the best hour in 2:12¼.

Ben Walker, Dorchester horseman, won the the initial heat in the 2:18 trot at Canton, Ohio, with Hickory Jr., 2:12, and Hickory Jr. was the third in the summary of eleven heats.

Walter J. Salmon has been engaged to manage the Hartford fair and Grand Circuit meeting the first week of September.

Iron, 2:16, the trotting mare exported last Fall, has been in a four race already by beating the fast field of trotters.

ITALY TO HAVE A HOLIDAY FOR ELKINS BRIDAL
King Decides to Grant Amnesty to Political Exiles in Honor of Event.
TO ISSUE PROCLAMATION

By Boston American Leased Wire.
LONDON, July 14.—The Globe to-day publishes a dispatch from its Rome correspondent announcing the King of Italy has decided to make the celebration of the wedding of Duke d'Abruzzi and Miss Katherine Elkins a holiday of considerable importance throughout the Kingdom.
In connection with the festivities a proclamation of general amnesty will be issued whereby political offenders, particularly of a political character, whether banished or out of the country of their own accord, will be allowed to return and enjoy again the full privileges of citizenship.
Those to be benefited, it is said, will include Signor Nuncio Nasi, former Minister of Education, who some time ago was convicted for the embezzlement of $500,000, which he declared had been spent in good faith for secret information concerning foreign powers.
He will now be allowed, according to the globe correspondent, to take his seat in the Chamber of Deputies, where he represents Trapani, Sicily.
Another exile who will be restored to good standing is Commendatore Raffaele Palizzolo, former member of the Chamber of Deputies, who has been called leader of the Mafia and who was convicted of murder in a famous political murder trial in 1903. He is now in the United States.

Miss Brinkley Is a Creator---That's Better Than Being an Artist

She Pleases Thousands—That Is Better Than Being a Creator, and—SHE IS AN ARTIST

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal-Examiner

Here's a letter from Wallace D. Jennings, of the Jennings Publishing Company. It is printed because it will amuse our cheerful young artist, Miss Nell Brinkley — hard workers NEED amusement. It is printed also because it is a letter well written:

Editor Magazine Page:

Will you kindly explain to me in what respect Miss Nell Brinkley's drawings grace your department? Are they examples of a new poster art? Do you consider her men and women natural? Is there any reason why a woman's head should be portrayed as covered with weather-beaten moss instead of human hair? Won't you admit that Miss Brinkley's sense of proportion is about as distorted as that of Charles Dana Gibson, who draws people about nine feet tall, measured by their own feet? Did Miss Brinkley never see a calm day? In her pictures, skirts are always blowing, hair is always streaming and trees are always swaying. Her men? They strike me as next to impossible. And her women? Altogether impossible.

If Miss Brinkley can justify her style of artisanship (I cannot bring myself to say art), will you kindly ask her to do so for my special benefit?

Yours very truly,

WALLACE D. JENNINGS.

SUCCESS, Mr. Jennings, is an answer to almost any question. Nell Brinkley, a young woman recently imported from her home in Denver, two thousand miles west and one mile up in the air, pleases hundreds of thousands of young women and men that read the BOSTON AMERICAN. People NEED to be pleased in this world. Miss Brinkley PLEASES them, she is successful. She is just going home to Denver, on her first vacation, to hear the people out there tell her how wonderful she is and always was. She in turn will tell them that it is easy for a Denver girl to amaze, delight and instruct the East, and that is as it should be.

You are wrong about hair, Mr. Jennings. The hair that Miss Brinkley presents is not "weather-beaten moss." It is REAL HAIR, and Miss Brinkley copies it from her own head.

You want to know if Miss Brinkley's men and women are "natural." No, they are NOT, and that is the beauty of them. Michael Angelo's men and women are not natural. There's more manhood, more splendid humanity in the prophets, sybils and others that he has gathered together in the Sistine Chapel than in any fifty million REAL human beings that ever lived on earth.

Tad's "Bunk" isn't natural, either. We value Tad's Bunk, as we value Nell Brinkley's girl. There never was such a dog as Bunk, yet Bunk is real "art."

The Venus of Milo isn't natural, from our modern, false point of view, and more's the dreadful, fashionable pity. If we had such women as that, such waists, and shoulders, and dignity, we'd have fewer funerals and better government.

The two greatest human beings ever created are Michael Angelo's Moses and the Venus of Milo—both marble. Get good photographs of these two statues, frame them side by side, and you'll see a vision of the ideal mother and father that ten thousand years from now will realize the vision of the great Greek and of the great Italian.

Nell Brinkley isn't natural. She is better than natural. POWERS isn't natural. He represents the wit of all America and Ireland coming out of the point of a pen. If he were natural he would be dull.

We don't need to defend Charles Dana Gibson—his success defends him. Both he and Nell Brinkley are ABOVE all that is natural.

Perhaps Gibson's men and women ARE too tall—that fact has induced lots of other men and women to stand up straight and try to LOOK taller—an excellent thing for their lungs. Gibson as a lung developer has done much good on various continents.

Nell Brinkley's men and women do blow about in the wind considerably and strike queer attitudes. But Nell Brinkley, like other real artists, lives in the world of imagination—and in THAT world the wind is always blowing, trees are swaying, hair is streaming, and men always look like intense creatures, not like the ordinary REAL human beings, accurately described by Evelyn Thaw as "pie-faced mutts."

Nell Brinkley, Raphael, Gibson, Michael Angelo, Tad, Boucher, Powers, Phidias and Swinnerton, all help us to get away from that which is natural.

The turnip seems natural, the orchid seems a freak. Which would you rather be? Mr. Jennings's letter doesn't sound like an orchid.

P. S.—Note one interesting fact. Men and women can only interpret and express THEMSELVES. A wise old Greek—we have mentioned him six times and shall probably mention him six thousand times—said that "if the camels had a god, that god would have four legs and a hump." It is true, because camels, like men, can only express and conceive what is in THEM.

And Nell Brinkley, Titian, Tad, Praxiteles, Gibson, Botticelli, Powers and Leonardo can express only things which are actually in THEM—everything that they do is in some way a reproduction of themselves.

For instance, Gibson makes men big and tall, men that look honest and earnest. GIBSON IS BIG AND TALL, HE LOOKS HONEST AND EARNEST, and, by the way, HE IS BOTH.

Miss Brinkley pictures chiefly hair, which Mr. Jennings sacrilegiously calls "moss," and Miss Brinkley, curiously enough, at the first superficial glance, IS chiefly hair—certainly she wears not less than a bushel of the very lightest, curliest kind.

Powers's pictures are all pure humor, good-natured contempt for the world—and THAT is Powers.

Tad's work is a mixture of compassion, fun and boyish cynicism—that is Tad.

Opper—perhaps the only perfect example of the genius and business man, butterfly and honey bee, now living—reproduces his own interesting thoughts in his "Common People," his "Trusts," even in his "Happy Hooligan" and his mule "Maud."

We pick the flowers, hold them for a moment and drop them; we notice carelessly that each flower gives forth its own fragrance.

We ourselves, poor human beings, are nothing but thinking flowers MADE OF MEAT, and our brains give out reflections of ourselves as the perfume—the brain of the flower—gives out the flower's reflection.

AN IDEAL ENTERPRISE

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

A DEPARTMENT store in the interest of children is the latest idea to come to the city of New York—a commercial industry devoted to the interest of children, to help them out in the country during the hot Summer seasons, on a farm to be known as the children's farm.

This farm will be designed in features characterizing a complete, typical home for children, with buildings especially constructed and designed for this purpose, favorably located, of easy access to the city, spacious surroundings, groves, lawns, flowers, gardens, broad acres, buildings artistically grouped, of various architectural designs, all combining to make this an ideal children's farm.

A gentleman now living outside of New York city, through his experience and study of the conditions of children in the closely crowded tenement districts of this city during the hot Summer weather, has become inspired with this idea of helping them out into the country, through a commercial industry that will be called the "Children's Farm Store." It is not a money making idea, as all net profits will go to the farm, capital to become liquidated and retired at some extended terms of years.

The "Children's Farm Store," together with the farm, will be organized and incorporated under one system, with this single purpose in view of helping as many children of New York out into the country each year as the net earnings of the store will permit, making it a perpetual continuous, charitable work on lines blending with commerce, characterizing it as a self-sustaining, independent, unceasing benefit.

The impetus first given to this warm weather idea was really born in a snow bank, as its originator puts it—a mid-winter incident that came to his attention while walking through the crowded quarters of the city, just after a heavy fall of snow.

When the wind began piling it up in little drifts about the streets, his attention was attracted to two children playing in the banks of snow, thinly clad, nearly bare-footed, scarcely any shoes on their feet, and seemingly enjoying themselves very much.

A thought occurred that if children could possibly enjoy themselves under those conditions, what would be the influence on their present or future lives under different and more favorable environments?

There is one thing certain. Nature and Nature's God never intended children to be immured in hot city apartments; to breathe the fetid air of city streets; to sleep in sweltering, crowded rooms, and to be deprived of the natural rights of every human being—sun, air and earth.

It is the greed, the selfishness and the monopoly of man which have caused children to be so imprisoned.

Through the unselfishness, the consideration, the love of man must their emancipation come.

Meanwhile the children are increasing, and the cities growing more and more intolerable.

Scores of helpful and healthful plans are being formulated by noble men and women to relieve the sufferings of the innocent little victims of our pernicious industrial system. Co-operative associations are established in many parts of the country, and most of them are prospering.

The newcomer in the ranks of big-hearted helpful enterprise should be welcomed, with his department store industry for children.

SECRETARY ABRAHAMS ON THE LABOR PLANKS

(Henry Abrahams, Secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union, in Sunday's Boston Post)

Henry Abrahams.

"As a rule, political platforms are more observed in the breach than by any rigid adherence to them after election is over. We shall have to wait till Congress enacts some law on this subject of injunction and it is passed upon by a court competent to judge before we shall know just what either party really means.

"The Republican party says 'the writ of injunction should be more accurately defined.' The Democrats say 'experience has proven the necessity of a modification of the present law relating to injunctions.'

"It seems to me about the same thing, only worded a little differently. One is afraid and the other dares not. To my mind, neither plank on injunctions means a great deal."
